

County Form of Government - 1988

Definitions:

The term commission, as used throughout the survey, refers to an elected body whose members may be called commissioners, supervisors, freeholders, or the like.

The term elected presiding officer, as used throughout the survey, refers to the elected head of the county government who may be called the executive, chairman, judge, or the like.

Please indicate which of the following best describes your current legal form of government, as defined by your charter or ordinance or by state law. (Please read all definitions first and check only one.)

- 1 a. Each elected commissioner or board member serves as director of one or more functional departments (e.g. Public Works Director or Director of Health and Human Services) in addition to their policymaking roles. The presiding officer may be chosen from the board or elected directly (e.g., county judge). This is popularly known as the commission form.
- 2 b. An elected board sets policy, adopts legislation, and the budget. The council appoints an administrator to conduct the day-to-day county business, to prepare the budget, to oversee department heads, and to recommend policy to the board. This is popularly known as the council-administrator (manager) form.
- 3 c. The commissioners or supervisors are the legislative body responsible for making policy. The executive, elected at-large, implements county board policies, prepares the budget, and acts as county spokesperson. The executive often has veto power, which can be overridden. This form fully separates the legislative and executive powers and is popularly known as the council-elected executive form.
