A PROGRAM OF EXCELLENCE IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Building on the complementary approaches of two prestigious institutions with rich and diverse academic traditions, Sciences Po’s Paris School of International Affairs (PSIA) and Columbia University’s School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA), both members of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs (APSIA), offer a dual Master’s degree program in International Affairs. The curriculum blends international relations expertise with courses designed to provide professional skills. It is designed to offer advanced education in the area of international affairs and to give students the opportunity to develop a top-level career in the private, public or non-profit sectors. No proficiency in French is required to study at Sciences Po’s Paris School of International Affairs (PSIA). For students who seek a financial orientation in international relations and who have French language proficiency, Sciences Po also offers a dual degree with SIPA in Finance and Strategy.

Dual degree alumni are currently working in Paris, New York, London, Geneva, Copenhagen or Sao Paulo, within institutions as varied as Goldman Sachs, the World Bank, Doctors without Borders, the European Commission or Bloomberg LP.
