

University of Connecticut Field school
Crown Point New York.

The site is an abandoned 19th century iron-ore mining town.

Anth 3990 Sec 011
Residential Field School in Historical Archaeology -
June 30 - July 25, 2008
6 credits

This 4 week intensive course introduces students to the fundamentals of historical archaeology, including archeological survey, excavation and historical research. We will be excavating at Hammondville, Crown Point, NY, a 19th century mining "Ghost Town" located in the eastern Adirondack region. The course is scheduled for Monday - Friday, 8am - 4pm, so students' weekends are free. Accommodations at a NYS camp ground will be arranged and food will be provided. Students are responsible for transportation, basic camping equipment, the cost of room and board ($100.00/wk) and a $50.00 lab fee.

Completing the field school provides students with the basic qualifications for a job as a field technician in contract archaeology.

Contact information:

Dr. Kevin McBride - KMcBride@mptn-nsn.gov
Sarah Sportman - sarah_sportman@yahoo.com

Sarah P. Sportman
Doctoral Student
Department of Anthropology
354 Mansfield Road Unit 2176
Storrs, CT 06269-2176