Film screening of Trop noire pour être française
Followed by Q&A with Director Isabelle Boni-Claverie

In this documentary film recently aired on ARTE, Isabelle Boni-Claverie explores the persistence of racism in France, and the lasting impact of the French colonial past. Through the lens of her personal history as the granddaughter of an African from the Ivory Coast who married a white French woman in the 1930s, she utilizes anonymous interviews as well as conversations with sociologists and historians (including Pap Ndiaye and Schille Mbembe) to explore questions of race, culture, identity and belonging.
