In 1999, the NYATCC project was awarded a Preservation League award for excellence from the Preservation League of New York State.

Historical Note:
The New York Architectural Terra-Cotta Company was in operation at 401 Vernon Avenue in Long Island City, Queens, New York, from 1886 to 1932. Of the forty-eight major terra cotta manufacturers in the United States, it was the only company that operated its plant in New York City. The NYATCC supplied architectural terra cotta for projects throughout the United States and Canada, including over 2,000 buildings. Among their most prominent commissions are Carnegie Hall and the Plaza Hotel in New York City.

Scope and Content:
This collection contains nearly 6,000 files of the company covering the period from 1889 to 1921, with the bulk of documents produced between 1911 and 1920. The majority of the collection is comprised of architectural bid documents, each noting the architect, building, and location, as well as estimated costs, sketches, and related correspondence. These bid records provide information for 6,248 separate projects in New York City, the United States, and several foreign countries. These bid documents represent commissions not awarded to NYATCC, and do, in some cases, indicate the outcome of the bid. Architects represented include Carrère & Hastings, D.H. Burnham & Co.; Cass Gilbert; McKim, Mead & White; George Post; Warren & Wetmore; Schwartz & Gross, and many others.

The collection also contains folders of correspondence, financial records, and office memoranda, including some describing the formative years, 1911-1914, of the National Terra Cotta Society, as well as trade catalogs and job photographs. Most of the folders have been given a title indicating their general content. Individual descriptive entries represent only the material of specific interest, not the complete content of each folder. Also of note are two albums containing photographs of sample pieces of terra cotta, and month-by-month construction records for three buildings: the American Theater (42nd Street, New York City, 1892) designed by Charles Coolidge Haight; the Renaissance Apartments (Brooklyn, N.Y., 1889) and the Imperial Apartments (Brooklyn, N.Y., 1890) both designed by Montrose Morris.

This collection may be especially useful for researchers interested in trends in glaze finished in the 1910s; typical office practices for architects and contractors; the development of building technology and subsequent changes in building types (i.e. fewer stables, more auto garages); the costs involved in building, including bidding wars and competition between businesses; and raw data on alternative or substitute building materials.

Arrangement and Organization:

This collection is arranged in two series: Series I: Bid Records and Series II: Office Records. Materials in Series I are contained in Boxes 1 through 94. Folders are in bid number order. An index to this series lists these folders, organized geographically by state and city, then alphabetically by project name. Materials in Series II are contained in Boxes 94 to 105. Folders are organized according to the filing system devised by the NYACC, which is generally alphabetical. Photographs and miscellaneous items are listed at the end of Series II.

SERIES I: BID FILES

Scope and Content Note

The majority of the collection is comprised of architectural bid documents, each noting the architect, building, and location, as well as estimated costs, sketches, and related correspondence. These bid records provide information for 6,248 separate projects in New York City, the United States, and several foreign countries. These bid documents represent commissions not awarded to NYATCC, and do, in some cases, indicate the outcome of the bid. Architects represented include D.H. Burnham & Co.; Cass Gilbert; McKim, Mead & White; George Post; Warren & Wetmore; Schwartz & Gross, and many others.

The information included in the spreadsheet linked below was transcribed from two kinds of documents found in all the bid files: 1) a card labeled "Executive & Selling Data" (a printed card with handwritten information), hereafter referred to as "ESD", and 2) a typed letter of estimate, referred to as "LE". For representative examples, please see Appendices A-D. When data on these two forms conflicted, i.e. the name of the architect was different, other documents in the file were consulted. Some files contain a variety of other documents, including correspondence, and original architectural drawings and reprographic prints.

Series Inventory

An excel spreadsheet contains complete descriptions of the files in this series.

http://www.columbia.edu/cu/lweb/img/assets/8897/NYATCC_bids_index.XLS
Some brief notes on the spreadsheet’s field contents:

1. The project or job number noted in this series was assigned by the NYATCC and ranges from 21981 to 29282 and spans the years 1913 to February 1921. As a rule, the earliest date on the record was the one listed in this series. It is not unusual for the documents from one project to reflect a range of dates, as the bids were negotiated over time. These fields are highlighted in red and yellow, respectively, in Appendices A and B.

2. The architect noted is usually the name of an individual architect or firm, although it can also refer to drawings produced in-house by the client, by an engineering department, or by government architects. Where NYATCC is indicated as the architect, the order was probably for stock pieces, i.e. stock trim, chimney caps, etc. This field is highlighted in blue in Appendices A and B.

3. The project field indicates the name of the building, taken from the ESD card. It can reflect a specific building or simply a building type. This field is highlighted in orange in Appendices A and B.

4. The client specifies the individual or firm purchasing the terra cotta for a project. This information is often omitted from the documents. This field is highlighted in purple in Appendix B.

5. The contractor field can reflect a variety of entries: owner, builder, agent or salesman, or construction company, in addition to the contractor. The George A. Fuller Company is one familiar example. Therefore, this field reflects the addressee to whom the contract documents were sent. In this field, “NYATCC Pittsburgh” often appears after 1915, reflecting the establishment of a branch office. It seems that this office acted in an agent capacity, procuring work for NYATCC in the Pennsylvania region.
6. “Address” indicates the street address of the project. Often in the place of an exact address, the intersection, a corner, or even a measurement (e.g. N. side of 86th St., 100’ e of Broadway,” was given. This field is highlighted in green in Appendix A.

7. The terms “dead” or “abandoned” in this series are ambiguous. Most probably, “dead” meant simply that the company was not likely to be awarded the job, and not that the project was unbuilt. “Abandoned” is even more unclear; the term could mean that the whole project fell through or that NYATCC rejected the job. When a question mark appears in this field, it is transcribed from the ESD card. This field is highlighted in pink in Appendices A, C, and D.

8. The “building type” field contains terms taken from the Getty Art and Architecture Thesaurus and represents a generic category.

9. In the “Notes” field, anything of interest is noted, such as correspondence, sketches, revised bids, letterheads of unusual design, architectural drawings, polychrome finishes, photographs or, in the case of a very costly job, a note for the bid. “Sketches” refers to the estimator’s sketches copied from the architect’s plans, not those drawn by the architect himself.
