DESCRIPTION: Correspondence, manuscripts, typescripts, notes, photographs and printed materials of Felix Adler, 1851-1933 (Columbia A.B., 1870) religious leader and educator. The correspondence includes letters from the leaders and members of the Society for Ethical Culture which Adler founded in 1876, the ethical movement abroad, religious and political figures and extensive correspondence with his family, particularly his wife, Helen Goldmark Adler, to whom Adler wrote long, detailed letters about his activities, personal and professional. The family letters date back to his parent's generation when they were still living in Germany and many letters are in German and Hebrew. Among the cataloged correspondents are Louis D. Brandeis, John Dewey, Abraham Geiger, Charles Evans Hughes, William James, Jacob Riis, and Lillian Wald. There is a series of typescript copies of letters to and from Adler, many for which there are no originals. These letters were probably prepared for Adler's wife and his daughter, Eleanor, as working copies for a projected life and letters of Adler, and both have made holograph annotations on the copies. The manuscripts and typescripts span Adler's entire life for he was a prodigious writer. Included are childhood and school day poems and essays, and later manuscripts for published and unpublished lectures, articles, essays, books, notes, diaries, and random jottings on a wide range of topics: ethics, morality, philosophy, theology, Bible, Judaism, politics, social reform, arts and letters. There is a full set of lecture notes from 1902 to 1933, for his courses in social and political ethics at Columbia University. In addition to his voluminous diary entries, he also kept records of conversations with various individuals he met over the years. Also there are records for the Society for Ethical Culture and its schools. Much of the collection is classified by subject and arranged in numbered folders. There is an incomplete index of personal names for classification 100 and 200 only.
