DESCRIPTION. Manuscripts of Columbia University's Research Project on Hungary, which was carried out in the late 1950's. This project interviewed people who had left Hungary during the 1956 uprising. This collection consists of transcripts of the 401 interviews which were done. There is one complete bound set, and one set of loose interviews, nos. 100-626. Most of the interviews cover the following topics: the revolt of 1956, personal life, work experience, economic conditions, social problems, education, friends and family, government, party, police, army, communications, ideology, attitudes, and opinions. There are also a few more unstructured interviews defined as "open-ended conversations, largely with expert informants", covering topics such as those above but also including religious affairs, the intelligentsia, and Hungary and the Soviet Union.
