We can increase awareness of Columbia Libraries and its special collections by sharing our images through the Columbia Digital Library Collections site in Flickr. Please fill out this form if you wish to contribute a group of images from an online exhibit or digital project. Submit the completed form to Robbie Blitz at rlb179@columbia.edu.

I. Contact Information

Name ______________________________________________________________

Title ______________________________________________________________

Email ______________________________________________________________

Supervisor _________________________________________________________

Date ________________________ ______________________________________

II. Images

Note that restricted images cannot be posted to Flickr

(a) Are all the images rights cleared and/or in the public domain? Yes □ No □

(b) Does the set include a mix of unrestricted and restricted images? Yes □ No □

If Yes, list the filenames/URLs of restricted images:

________________________________________________________________________

_____________________________________________________________________________

III. Flickr Set

Photos in Flickr are grouped into “sets,” that is a logical grouping of images such as all the images from an online exhibition or a digital project.

(a) Set Title (see illustration)

Provide the title and URL of the online exhibit or project. Unless you specify otherwise, this title will be used as the title for the Flickr set. Links will be added to the online exhibit/project and your repository’s homepage.

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________
(b) Set Description (see illustration)

Provide a description of the material to appear on the set homepage. Attach an additional page if needed.

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

(c) Set Image (see illustration)

Select one image to represent the set. Provide the URL or filename of the image. If you prefer, an image can be selected for you.

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________________
The Chinese Paper Gods are part of the Anne S. Goudsward Collection in C.V. Starr East Asian Library, Columbia University. These prints were assembled by Anne S. Goudsward (1906–2005) in 1921, when as a Christian missionary in Peking she became interested in local folk religious practices. She studied the paper gods in this collection for much of her life. After publishing her research conclusions in 1991, she donated these prints to the Starr Library. For more information see the web resource Chinese Paper Gods.

381 photos | 561 views | Add a comment
Items are from between 02 Feb 2009 & 05 Aug 2010.