The National Association defines an amateur oarsman to be: One who does not enter into an open competition, or to be: One who does not compete with or against professionals for any mutual agreement or understanding, expressed or implied, whose membership of any rowing or other athletic club is not brought about, or does not continue, because of the pursuit of athletic exercises as a means of livelihood; or, whose membership of any rowing or other athletic club was not brought about, or does not continue, because of any mutual agreement or understanding, expressed or implied.
implied, whereby his becoming or continuing a member of such club would be of any pecuniary benefit to him whatever, and who shall otherwise conform to the rules and regulations of this Association.

THE JUNIOR DEFINITION.

A junior oarsman is one who has never pulled an oar in a senior race nor been a winning oarsman in a junior race. Competitions among members of his own club, or a private match, will not affect the standing as a junior of any oarsman or sculler. The qualifications of a junior oarsman or sculler shall relate to each time of his coming to the starting-post, whether in a trial or a final heat.

The definitions adopted by other Associations here and in England will be found in the CLIPPER ALMANAC for 1833.

THE DAWNING OF THE YEAR.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER ANNUAL.

BY T. C. HARBAGH.

The New Year has come from its bowers,
Where the winds of the Orient blow;
It has dawnt on a south land of flowers,
And has smiled on a north land of snow.

The winds of the Orient blow,
And the New Year has come from its bowers.

DANIEL'S UMBRELLA.

Young Moses Kapinskowski hungered for a chance to take in the amusive and instructive theatre, the other night, but old Moses objected, first on the score of expense; secondly, because theatre-going was a dissipation. "Tell to me, mine sone, vat you hafe seen deese night," said the elder, "yeoost led me to cry down the glitter and the show, for these are richly-clad houris before us, how can we fail to gaze enraptured upon a paradise of intoxicating beauty, and often lend welcome aid to the imagination in reproducing the past, and give delight to the eye in maintaining the harmony between the men and women of the present and their surroundings. Many of the plays produced here within the past ten years have been so artistically, so perfectly set, that their effects have been far broader and deeper, their illusions more vivid, their lessons far more decided and lasting than they could have been without the genius that gave shape and color to the thousand and one objects embraced in the still life of the stage. Then, female beauty is more or less identified and mingled with pictorial art; and while we gaze enraptured upon a land of intoxicating beauty, and watch the graceful movements of the divinities are robed in vestments made not by Worth, but by Madame Merit in her West-side garret, and thatched with hats bought of one of the five-and-thirty milliners all in a row in Division street? These be parlous words, my masters, but — is not Pictorial Art the Actor's modern rival?"

The old clown kissed a rosy cheek
And smoothed a golden curl,
Then to his bosom closely pressed,
With a sigh, the little girl.

"O Tiny Tess, the world to-night
Knelt at the jester's shrine,
The manager has told me that
Myself I did outshine.

Yet all the while I seemed to feel
A baby's hand in mine!

"I know that in a little crib
A baby lay dead away,
By a mother watched with tearful eyes,
They dimmed the lights in the dressing-room,
And raised his head with roguish hands,
And then I seemed to see
Two tiny hands I've often kiss'd
And here ten thousand people, Tess,
Laughed at the old clown's glee!

They say the clown is but a fool,
Whose kingdom is the ring;
They come to hear his studied jests,
A thousand miles away,
Or 'neath the powder and the cap,
Laughed still at his latest jest,
He sat alone till a little child,
And straight the baby fell asleep,
Bent over Tiny Tess,
And no one laughed, and no one sang,
And all the people shouted while
Ask of the old clown's heart;
A sorrow weighed him down;
And then I seemed to see
And here ten thousand people, Tess,
And raised his head with roguish hands,
And climbed upon his knee;
And then throw her arms around his neck,
Laughing: "How gay are we!"

ODE TO DRAW POKER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER ANNUAL.

BY S. SLOKUM

Draw Poker, O draw poker!

Of all the games in vogue, bar none, the boss
Art thou; the game pre-eminent. On this
I'II stake a steak—beef, bear or venison,
As one may like it. Euchre, whist, "old sledge;"
And many others played by many men,
Are nowhere in the race. The lead that the rock
Full many lengths. When first thou didst appear
I neither know nor care; but know I this:
That canst to conquer, and a conquered world
Like aeh in the face of a bar Austria,
Which ostracises, spurns and boycotts thee;
But all the same, that haughty sovereignty
Art thou; the game pre-eminent: On
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

The chronic "growler" and the "jolly soul,"
The nervous man and man who "knows it all,"
The "pass," the modest bet, the "raise"—"raise
The frequent, speculative, fateful "draw,"
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal:
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"fours"—
Too often strays not worth a five-cent "chip"—
With "fulls" and "flushes," "royal" and the
"straight;"
And "four of a kind," all too oft—how vexing they!
And then the "ante," limited or not,
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"suits;"
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;"
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal;
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

The contest narrowed down to two, when comes
The tug-of-war! The bet sagacious, then
The "raise"—"raise out!"
The contest narrowed down to two, when comes
The tag-of-war! The bet sagacious, then
The square-toed "raise"—perchance a guileful
"bluff;"
At last the "call," and best of all the "pot;"
What with all these, 1 say, not mentioning
The ever-changing futil "hands" we get
That give us "pairs;" and "threes;" and "straights;" and "fours;"
And tryest sorely, poker, thou, his soul;
With a "pernicious (true) activity!"
Into "innocuous (blank) desuetude"—
It would be well; but thou hast come to stay—
The "pass," the modest bet, the "raise"—"raise
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"suits;"
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;"
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal;
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

The "fours"—
Too often strays not worth a five-cent "chip"—
With "fulls" and "flushes," "royal" and the
"straight;"
And "four of a kind," all too oft—how vexing they!
And then the "ante," limited or not,
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"suits;"
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;"
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal;
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

The interesting thing is, that though we do not
Meet with all these, 1 say, not mentioning
The square-toed "raise"—perchance a guileful
"bluff;"
At last the "call," and best of all the "pot;"
What with all these—1 leave the "jackpot" out—
With interest unflagging round the board,
Excitement more or less subdued, but still,
Anxiety and hope deferred, yet strong.
"I'll go," says one to the frequent, speculative, fateful "draw;"
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"suits;"
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;"
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal;
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

The "fours"—
Too often strays not worth a five-cent "chip"—
With "fulls" and "flushes," "royal" and the
"straight;"
And "four of a kind," all too oft—how vexing they!
And then the "ante," limited or not,
The "blind," and quick the "straddling" of the
"suits;"
Or, otherwise, the general "chipping in;"
And "passing of the buck," as goes the deal;
The "standing pat"—perchance to drop quite flat;
Whose grip relaxeth not! O poker, thou.

Percey Bysshe Shelley and the Theatre.

Up to a few years ago there was in Fishamble street, Dublin, an old theatre, where, in 1742, Handel presented the famous performance of "The Puritans" and cantatas, when the goddess of Dulness, alarmed for her British sovereignty, "drove him to the Huguenot chapel." In this old theatre, four years afterwards, the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley, not yet out of his teens, addressed an Irish audience for an hour. A reporter, sent by the police to furnish an account of the "Popish meeting," as they termed it, describes him as "a young boy whose speech was replete with much elegant language." Not far away, at No. 7 Angel Street, was born, and from the balcony of the old house Percy and his sister used to scatter the young evangelist's Irish pamphlets among the people below. In another part of the ancient city—which, by-the-way, was never an Irish city—is Christ Church Cathedral, and, strange to say, Hell is within a stone's throw. The story of Death and Mr. Hornbook, says Bobby Burns.

In just as true as the Devil's in Hell of Dublin City.

It was a place where boys were sold and furnished bedtings let, as set forth in this old advertisement:

To be let. Furnished Apartments in Hell. N.B.—They are well suited to a lawyer.

Over the entrance were the effigies of the Devil, horns, hoofs, tail and all, which have long since been worked over by many a fresh sculptor. Close by is the last resting-place of Dean Swift. Donnybrook, where the fair used to glorify the month of June, is a dirty village on the skirts of Dublin, but the fields of revelry and riot, near which the Dodder ripples past, may still be seen; and through Sir John Barrington's mirthful eyes we see the lively cussedness that has made the spot a favorite with playrights for so many generations.

Music-Publishers declare that whenever there appears in the papers one of those exaggerated and reckless articles concerning song-writers of the day, and the fabulous amounts they occasionally make on some simple song, they are sure to be overrun in a little wealth from their ambitious but idealess brethren.

A well-known director of rehearsals is wont to come at the company at the first meeting in this matter-of-fact way: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am engaged to direct this rehearsal. I will attend to my business—and I hope you will all attend to yours."

This meaning has the happy effect of squeezing, at once, those nuisances who continually wish to "venture a slight suggestion."
