SKIN GRAFTING ON THE STAGE.

This Winter, a well known actress, being in danger of disfigurement through an accident to her face, her physician supplied the necessary grafting from his own person and saved her good looks. This caused no little talk and some joking at the time, as the physician was said to have borrowed the piece from his leg. And now in a funny play performed at one of the Paris theatres, the occurrence, somewhat adorned, is the cause of unfailing merriment to the audience. In the play, the physician is supposed to have exchanged epidermis with the actress, and as each patch retains its identity, when the physician, a rather loose fellow, is kicked, the actress feels a blow on her face and hits back any one at hand. On the other side, as often as the actress is kissed, the physician is horrified that any one should take such liberty with his limb,

FAMOUS PLAYHOUSES OF OLDEN TIME.

THE JOHN STREET THEATRE (1767).

The John Street Theatre, one of the most famous of earlier day playhouses in America, was built, in the Summer of 1767, on the northerly side of John Street, about half a dozen doors from Broadway, and continued to be used for dramatic purposes for more than thirty years. Its site is now occupied by storehouses, and the theatre stood in the rear of the stores numbered 17, 19 and 21. The building was an unsightly object, principally of wood, painted red, and stood some sixty feet back from the street, having a covered way of rough wooden material, from the pavement to the doors. The stage was of good dimensions, and the dressing rooms and green room were under it, but after the Revolution they were removed to a wing added for that purpose, on the west side. The auditorium was fitted up with a pit, two rows of boxes and a gallery, and, when filled at the usual prices, would contain $800. It was first opened by Mr. Douglass on Dec. 7, 1767, with the following bill: The comedy of "The Stratagem," an occasional epilogue by Mrs. Douglass, and the dramatic satire, "Lethé." The performances commenced at six o'clock, and the ladies who desired reserved seats were compelled to send their servants at four o'clock, to retain them. The prices of admission were: Boxes, 8 shillings; pit, 5 shillings, and gallery, 3 shillings. Dec. 18, "The Clandestine Marriage" was performed, for probably the first time in America. The season closed June 2, 1768. After a lapse of several months it was announced that the "American Company," as Douglass' corps had been called, would commence another season Jan. 9, 1769, in a favorite comedy, and other entertainments. Jan. 16, "King John" was acted for the first time in New York. The season closed June 15, and in does not appear that the company performed in New York again until 1773. In that year, on April 12, the last season prior to the Revolution, and the last of Mr. Douglass' in New York, was commenced. June 21, Milton's masque of "Comus" was produced, for probably the first time in America. On July 26, a benefit was given towards the support of "the hospital about to be erected in New York." The hospital was afterwards erected some distance out of town, on Broadway, between what are now known as Duane and Worth Streets. The season closed Aug. 2, with the first performance in New York, of "She Stoops to Conquer." Oct. 24, 1774, the Provincial Congress passed a resolution recommending the suspension of all public amusements, which was regarded as law by all American patriots.

During the Revolution, and while the British army occupied the city, some amateurs among the officers kept it open under the title of the Theatre Royal, and from January, 1777, to June, 1781, performances were given by them at stated seasons. Lewis Hallam, with a feeble company, opened a regular season Aug. 24, 1785, the entertainments being announced as a course of lectures by Mr. Hallam, beginning with a prologue and terminating with a pantomime. During the latter appeared John Durang, a native of Lancaster, Pa., the first native American who obtained reputation on the stage as a dancer. The first benefit was that of Mr. Moore, Sept. 20, when a regular drama was performed for the first time in New York after the Revolution, being the petite comedy of "The Citizen." The season closed Nov. 1. The public had given so much encouragement to Hallam that he and his partner, Henry, brought on from Philadelphia, Pa., their entire company, and on Nov. 21, 1785, commenced a regular season, the theatre having been newly painted and decorated. On Dec. 16 "The School for Scandal" was produced, probably for the first time in America. On June 9, 1786, "The Rivals" was performed for the first time in America. The season closed July 21 with "Alexander the Great" and "The Poor Soldier," which had attained their eighteenth night, an unprecedented run at that time. The company returned and opened a season Feb. 14, 1787. April 16 the first public performance in a regular theatre of a play written by a citizen of America took place. Although other dramas had been written and published, none had hitherto been performed by professional actors. The piece was a comedy in five acts, entitled "The Contrast." Its author was Royal Tyler, of Massachusetts, who afterwards became Chief Justice of the State of Vermont. It was played four times during the season. That season closed June 9. It was again reopened under the same management Dec. 21, 1787. The season was interrupted from March 10 until Easter. On April 14, Mr. Harper being announced to perform Falstaff in "Henry IV," the whole city was wild with excitement from the outbreak of "The Doctors' Mob," which caused the theatre to be closed, and business was affected for some time thereafter. The season closed May 31. The theatre was not again reopened until April 14, 1789. On Nov. 24 Mr. Wignell took a benefit, and George Washington, then dwelling in New York as the President of the United States, who frequently attended the theatre, and with whom Mr. Wignell was a great favorite, honored that benefit with his presence. The season terminated Dec. 9, and was the last in New York that the American company remained intact.

Another season was commenced under the same management Oct. 10, 1791. Feb. 3, 1792, Mons. and Mme. Placide and their troupe made their first appearance in New York. The season closed May 10. The next season was opened Jan. 28, 1793, and in the meantime Mr. Henry had visited England and returned with a powerful reinforcement for his company. The opening bill was "The Dramatist," then acted for the first time in America. We find nothing of particular interest during that season, which probably closed June 9. The theatre was reopened under the same management Nov. 13, 1793. On March 3, 1794, an operatic spectacle by Mrs. Hatton, a sister of Mrs. Siddons and the Kembles, entitled "Tammany," was produced for the first time, and the society bearing that name attended in a body. On May 19 "A Bold Stroke for a Husband" was first performed in America. The season closed June 28, and towards its close Mr. Henry sold out his interest to Mr. Hodgkinson for $10,000. On Dec. 15, 1794, a season was commenced by the new managers, Hallam & Hodgkinson, but nothing of special interest occurred until its close on June 27, 1796. Owing to the prevalence of the yellow fever, which became epidemic, the next season was not commenced until Feb. 10, 1796, when "The Provoked Husband" and "The Spoiled Child" constituted the bill, and in the former Joseph Jefferson, the grandfather of the present comedian of that name, made his first appearance in New York, having previously made his American debut at the Federal Street Theatre, Boston, Mass., in the Fall of 1795. The season terminated June 25. The next was opened Sept. 26, 1796, an addition having been made to the managerial firm—William Dunlap. On Feb. 29 a riot occurred in the theatre, caused by Mrs. Hallam appearing upon the stage during the performance, and, walking to the side of Mr. Hodgkinson, appealing to the audience for their aid and protection, charging Mr. Hodgkinson with forcing her retirement from the stage. A majority of the audience finally supported Mr. Hodgkinson's view of the subject, and Mr. Hallam promised to withdraw his wife. The next night, however, Mr. Hodgkinson was so loudly hissed that he refused to continue his performance, and declined attending to his duties either as actor or manager for the remainder of the season. Mrs. Hallam made her first appearance May 31, acting Lady Teazle, previous to which she delivered a prologue written by Mr. Milne. The season closed June 14 with Mrs. Hallam's benefit. Mr. Hallam sold out his interest to his partners, and remained in the company as an actor. The theatre was opened Aug. 18, 1797, by Mr. Soloe's company, passing through the city to Philadelphia, and, although they were announced to remain but two nights, the season lasted until Oct. 17. Mr. Wignell, having returned with a company, opened a new theatre in Greenwich Street on Aug. 21, which interfered with the attendance at the John Street Theatre. Hodgkinson & Dunlap commenced their last season on Dec. 11, 1797, which closed on Jan. 13, 1798, and on that night the last performances took place on the boards of the John Street Theatre. It was next used as a carriage factory, and later in that year it was demolished.

THE FIRST BOWERY THEATRE (1826).

The vast improvements made in the eastern section of the city, and its great increase of population, including many wealthy and fashionable citizens who located their residences in the Seventh, Tenth and Fourteenth Wards (since, in their turn, deserted for more westerly situations), induced the formation of a company for the purpose of erecting a theatre in the Bowery, on the site of the old tavern and cattle market, known as the Bull's Head, then belonging to George Astor. Messrs. Gouverneur, Graham, James A. Hamilton, George W. Brown, P. M. Wetmore, T. S. Smith and Gillert were the projectors of this enterprise, and in process of time a very elegant structure was completed, having externally the similitude of white marble, with a spacious portico and lofty columns supporting an entablature and pediment. The size, both of stage and auditorium, was greater than any theatre in the country, the latter being able to seat about three thousand persons, and in point of decoration it was unsurpassed. It was fondly hoped by its proprietors that it would prove to be the favorite dramatic temple of New York, and that all other city theatres would sink subordinate in comparison; and, consequently, though popularly known as the Bull's Head Theatre, it was determined to give it the more comprehensive title of The New York Theatre, Bowery—a name it retained until it came into the hands of Hackett & Hamblin, who designated it simply The Bowery Theatre; though the latter, in a fit of naturalized patriotism, on the occasion of the Anderson riot at the Park, in 1831, proclaimed a change, and announced it as The American Theatre, by which its bills were headed for a year or two, after which its present title was resumed. The management of the New York Theatre, which hereafter, for convenience, we shall simply call "The Bowery," was intrusted to Charles Gilfert, and his experience as manager and skill as a musician, aided by the undoubted taste of his accomplished wife, were deemed sufficient guarantees of his fitness for the post.

George Barrett was engaged as stage manager; Mr. Taylor, from the Park, as leader of orchestra, and Messrs. Coyle & Serra, as scene painters. The prices of admission were at first fixed at fifty cents for the boxes and pit, and twenty-five cents for the gallery; but a few nights' experience proved that, to keep a portion of the house free from admixture with the vulgar and unrefined, it would be necessary to discriminate between the boxes and the pit, and the admission was raised to seventy-five cents for the former, and reduced to thirty-seven and a half for the latter, which soon produced the desired effect. The company engaged consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Duff, Mr. and Mrs. Young, Mr. and Mrs. George Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Lamb (the singer), C. Durang, Logan, C. Scott, Hamilton, Roberts, Edwin Forrest, Faulkner, Hyatt, Stone, Bernard, Kenyon, Essenden, Laws, Read and Beckwell, Mrs. Gilfert, Mrs. Hughes, old Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. Brazier, Miss Deblin, Little Miss Kent, etc. The theatre was first opened to the public on Monday evening, Oct. 23, 1826, and the experiment of lighting the stage with gas, then first attempted, was hailed with the greatest satisfaction by an audience which crowded the building in every part.

The first performance consisted of an opening address, written by Greville Mellen and recited by George Barrett; "The Road to Ruin," a second prize address written by Dr. Farmer and spoken by Mrs. Young, and the farce of "Raising the Wind." On Nov. 6 Edwin Forrest made his first appearance on the stage where he established his fame as a tragedian, acting the character of Othello. Dec. 13 Mr. Hamblin first appeared there, acting Virginius. Jan. 15, 1827, Signorina Garcia (Mme. Malibran) first attempted a character in English opera, that of Count Belino in "The Devil's Bridge," from which all the music was cut save the songs incidental to her part. Feb. 7 Mme. Francisquy Hutin made her first appearance in America, and introduced the modern French school of dancing on the American stage. During her first dance every lady in the lower tier of boxes left the house. June 27 Mlle. Celeste made her first appearance in America. On Sept. 11 Miss Jane Fisher, afterwards the late Mrs. Vernon, made her American debut. Sept. 12 the late George Holland made his first appearance on the American stage. Sept. 13 the late William B. Chapman made his first appearance in New York. On March 23, 1828, Louisa Lane (now Mrs. John Drew) made her first appearance in New York, acting Little Pickle. On May 12 Herr Cline, tight rope performer, made his first appearance in America. Monday evening, May 26, before the audience and performers had assembled, the theatre was discovered to be on fire, and was totally consumed. On its site, on Aug. 20, 1828, the second and brand new Bowery Theatre was erected. For fifty years English spoken plays continued on its boards. In 1879 it became the Thalia, by which name it is now known.

THE LAFAYETTE THEATRE (1825).

The Lafayette Amphitheatre, as it was then called, a building owned by C. W. Sanford, and situated on the westerly side of Laurens Street, about 100ft. north of Canal Street, was first opened to the public on July 4, 1825. The design of the front was attractive, but it always had an unfinished and cheap appearance. The performances consisted of the customary exercises of the circus, equestrian dramas, farces and ballets. On July 4, 1826, it was opened as a regular dramatic temple, under the title of The Lafayette Theatre, with the farce of "The Three Hunchbacks," and, for the first time in America, "The Dumb Girl of Genoa." The dramatic season closed early in December, and the theatre was rented to Mons. Villalave, a rope dancer, who opened it on the 18th with his troupe. During the following Summer it was entirely rebuilt by Mr. Sanford, from the plans of Mr. Grain, and, on its completion, was acknowledged to be the largest and most splendid theatre in the country. The front was of eastern white granite, presenting a novel and beautiful appearance, and the interior was decorated in a style equally chaste and elegant. The boxes were supported by bronze columns, with Ionic capitals carved and gilded, and a superb glass chandelier hung from the centre of the dome. The stage was 120ft. deep, and, in part, 100 wide, being larger than any then existing in England or America. It was considered a vast improvement that it was lighted from above, and that the stage machinery was also managed from the same elevated position. The season opened Sept. 29, 1827. June 6, 1828, for Mrs. Gilfert's benefit—which she had been prevented from taking at the Bowery Theatre in consequence of the burning of that establishment—the late Edwin Forrest performed Pythias, the Damon of Mr. Cooper. June 7 the late John Sefton made his first appearance in New York. June 20 the late A. W. Jackson, afterwards the manager of the Bowery and Winter Garden Theatres, made his first appearance in New York, acting Rigoletto in "The Broken Sword." On July 19 George W. Dixon made his first appearance in New York as a singer of comic songs. He attained considerable notoriety with his "Coal Black Rose" and other negro ditties before T. D. Rice and his "Jim Crow" electrified the public. The season closed in August. The theatre was reopened Dec. 24, 1823, under the stage management of James M. Scott. The season terminated about the middle of March, 1829, and recommenced April 6, with poor prospects of success. On the morning of the 11th, before daybreak, a fire, originating in a neighboring building, communicated to the theatre, and in a short time caused its total destruction. It was never rebuilt.

FRANCONI'S HIPPODROME (1853).

During the Winter of 1852-3 there was formed a syndicate of showmen (eight Americans), including Avery Smith, Richard Sands, Titus Sr., and Seth B. Howes, for the purpose of introducing the hippodrome to America. Corporal Thompson's lot, situated at the northwest corner of Twenty-third Street and Broadway (now occupied by the Fifth Avenue Hotel)—also once known as a hostelry, a sort of stopping place for turfmens, and other sporting gentlemen—was secured and a large structure erected. Although at that time the location was out of town, it was considered the most convenient. It was a little yellow house, originally built as a country residence, by Christopher Mildeberger. At the time referred to, fast trotting horses and light wagons were very popular, and Corporal Thompson's house was a favorite stopping place. The land belonged to the Howland estate. It did not bring in much income, and when Monnot made an offer for the property, his proposition was accepted. The little yellow house soon disappeared to make room for the Hippodrome, and there it was that the sports of the Roman circus, the chariot races and gladiatorial contests, and other performances, of which Mr. Barnum had, of late years, had so much to say, were anticipated for the entertainment of the curiosity seekers of that period. The buildings covered an area of about two acres of ground, with a Broadway front of two hundred feet, extending backwards so as to occupy nearly the entire block. The totte ens mble was striking and peculiar. Turreted abutments decorated with classic carvings, and capped with grotesque ornaments, and the extended pyramid striped with green and white, that formed the covering of the arena, gave it a most unique contour. To use a familiar mannerism, the Hippodrome was decidedly French. The fact is, it was a French idea—a regular Paris importation. The structure was built of brick walls, two stories high, while the auditorium was covered with a tin roof, the inside of the walls being covered with canvas. The first exhibition was given May 2, 1853. The people were Mme. Franconi, Henry Franconi, Mme. Calarini, Les Freres Siegrist, Mme. Siegrist, Sylvester, Mme. Ricard, Mlle. Mason, Angelina, Caroline Vidal, Leontine Geilhard, Adeline Pigett, Eugenie Maria, Mons. Ferdinand Maria, Eugenie Cerf, Mons. Mason, Mons. and Master Nicolo. H. Franconi was director of hippodrome; J. C. Adams, leader of band; Thomas Coates, conductor of orchestra. The prices of admission were: Boxes, 50cts.; reserved seats, $1; pit, 25cts.; season tickets, $50.

Long before the initial performance commenced, the sale of tickets was stopped, and many thousand were disappointed in obtaining admission. The immense amphitheatre was crowded in every part by an audience of 4,000, which was the capacity of the place. The circle was 700ft. in circumference. Franconi's Hippodrome was conducted in a style of novelty unknown in equestrian performances. It was a vast amphitheatre, having no stage, but enclosing a stradium, over which were run chariot races, and upon which other exciting displays were made. The Siegrist Brothers introduced in this city trap-eze and La Perche acts, and claim to be the first to have done them in America; but Mons. La Thorne, the celebrated athlete, and stage manager at 414 Broadway for a long time, did the La Perche about one week previous to the Siegrists' appearance. The contortionist, Mons. Deverne, and the Sylvester Family, in the spiral globe act (for the first time in America), were also seen. Franconi introduced his performing menage and race horses and racing ostriches. The latter were driven in harness and were rode under saddle by small boys around the race track. There were male and female characters, racing camels, elephants, reindeers, etc. The stag hunt was done with horses and hounds, leaping barricades and ditches (the ditches were filled with water, twelve feet wide). James M. Nixon was manager of the performance; he also did an act with two boys, on a platform on wheels, while being driven around the ring. Each performance commenced with "The Field of the Cloth of Gold." In the tournament with knights on horseback, they did a combat with battle axes and spears, finishing the act with one horse and rider supposed to be killed. The horse was a large one, broken to fall and feign dead; he allowed himself to be rolled over and over on a platform on wheels, drawn by a pair of horses around the track. He remained motionless, not moving a muscle. The entertainment was continued for about three weeks, when the American artists, with their horses, together with Chiarini and his performing horses, started for a Summer tour. J. A. Dumbolton took a benefit Aug. 12, 1853, on which occasion a trotting match took place between Lady Suffolk, entered by Hiram Woodruff, and Mac, entered by William Wheelan. The first season closed Nov. 26, 1853, and the party went to Boston. The second season opened June 26, 1854. The Fifth Avenue Hotel was built and finally completed in 1859.

PALMO'S OPERA HOUSE (1844).

This famous theatre was erected upon the site of Stoppani's Arcade Baths, Nos. 39 and 41 Chambers Street, by Sig. Ferdinand Palmo, who had accumulated a little fortune as proprietor of the Cafe des Mille Colonnes, in Broadway, between Hospital and Duane Streets. It was the ambition of his life to establish a theatre in which the music of his own beloved Italy might find a permanent home, and he had sufficient confidence in the taste and liberality of the public to believe that his investment would produce him a remunerative income. His was the fourth attempt to introduce Italian opera in this city, and the second to give it an individual local habitation. It proved disastrous, and poor Palmo sacrificed all that he possessed, and became, eventually, dependent upon the charity of others, after serving as a cook in a hotel and in several restaurants. It was a small theatre compared to those of the present day, and would seat hardly eight hundred persons. The house was well constructed, ingeniously contrived for acoustic purposes; in fact, it was as convenient and comfortable as any theatre. The initial performance took place Feb. 3, 1844, and the following is a copy of the programme:

PALMO'S N. Y. OPERA HOUSE.

Admission, $1 to all parts of the house. Doors open at 7. Performance to commence at half past 7.

The public are respectfully informed that this establishment will open for the season on

Box office open from 10 to 4 o'clock for obtaining tickets. Arrangements have been made by the management with the Railroad Company for the accommodation of ladies and gentlemen living up town, so that a large car, well lighted and warmed, will start after the theatre closes, and police officers will be in attendance to prevent disorder. The car will run from the corner of Chambers and Centre Streets, as far as Forty-second Street.

"La Sonnambula" was given May 11, for the first time in this city in Italian, followed 22, by "L'Elisir d'Amore" for the first time in New York in Italian. The season closed June 14, but was reopened July 1. The house was reopened Nov. 18, and the season closed Jan. 23, 1845. For a few nights, commencing Aug. 17, 1844, the original Ethiopian Serenaders held forth, including Harrington, Stanwood, and Dick Pelham. This house was the cradle of minstrelsy. It was here that the white vests and black pants (not worn by the original minstrel band) flourished when it was known as Dumbolton's Opera House, and here Lynch, Kavanagh, Nelson Kneass and others, performed in those burlesques that S. S. Sanford and the Buckleys made so popular. Nov. 9, William Chippendale opened this house for a short season of ballet, and Mlle. Augusta made her first appearance in this city, since her return from Europe, in "La Giselle." Nov. 23, Samuel Lover, the Irish author and humorist, appeared here, and continued for a few nights in an entertainment of his own.

It was not with the great singers that Palmo found his final difficulty, for these cormorants gauged their digestion according to the receipts of the house. Knowing their presence to be the attraction without which the house must close, they simply extorted from the management every available cent in his till, leaving the more obscure members of the troupe unprovided for. It is the feather which breaks the camel's back. Poor Palmo had petted his imported senoras until he had brought them into a state of co-operation with his final spasmodic endeavor to resuscitate his fortune, now reduced to the technical ownership of the property, firmly attached to the soil by heavy mortgages, vainly imagining that the poor dependents of the house would, like him, wait until some signal dispensation of Providence should restore the fallen hopes of the operatic drama. Palmo was disappointed, for he had never read the parable of the bellows blower as an appendage to the organ. His decisive night came with the Borghese in all the stateliness of her beauty and the irresistible attractiveness of her smile; a good audience was in attendance, and everything prophesied a favorable turn to Palmo's fortunes. The opera selected was one of Borghese's master roles; the overture was played with delicacy and accuracy which fairly astonished the house, for never did orchestra so far excel itself; then came the opening choruses, which were executed with a similar degree of excellence. Palmo and his admirers were delighted; the hitch in his day dream was apparently shaken out, and a revived future dawned before him. Then Borghese, the magnificent, stalked with queenlike tread to the centre of the footlights, and opened her arched mouth to give a solo, which was the feature of the piece. To her astonishment, no symphony, no delicate melody accompanied her movements or heralded her approach. In perplexity, she gazed upon the leader of the orchestra; indignantly she stamped her majestic foot to arouse him to his sense of duty, but that dignity remained in his chair, his violin firmly tucked beneath his arm. Borghese raved in vituperative Italian; the audience hissed at the obdurate orchestrans, for all imitated their leader and discarded their usual implements of toil. Finally, Palmo came on the stage and excitedly demanded the cause of the musicians' strike. "No pay," curtly answered a Teuton, quietly taking his cornet to pieces. "Pay you tomorrow!" shouted Palmo, in a state of frenzy. "Tonight's the time," suggested the cornet player, as he snapped the lock of his instrument case. A bright idea struck Palmo, so, whispering to Borghese to amuse the audience with a bit of pantomime for a moment, he rushed around to the box office there to draw from the receipts of the night sufficient to appease the rebellious orchestra. To his horror he found the entire treasury, bills, specie and coppers, in the hands of a deputy sheriff. Poor Palmo fainted, while the magnificent Borghese, breathing vengeance against the musicians, attempted to execute a grand aria without their aid. The effort was a success; but amid the thunders of applause greeting this Amazonian defiance, the orchestra tranquilly disappeared with their instruments under their arms—big fiddles, little fiddles, horns and drums leaving the queen-like Borghese and the remainder of her associates to raise music from some other quarter than from the deserted orchestra. This grand strike of the fiddlers terminate; Palmo's career as an opera director. Palmo introduced among us some of the finest artists which have appeared upon the lyric stage—Pico, Borghese, Castellan and others of celebrity, the rivalry of whose friends and admirers created a passing furor, which aided the dramatic treasury for the moment. Despite all the attractive prima donnas and the endeavors of the impresario charged as Palmo's proxy in the management, the opera commenced financially to droop, then to quiver, and finally to come to a dead standstill. After the Palmo collapsed the theatre stood at the mercy of sheriff's officers, landlords, substitutes and every species of legal officials charged with creditors' rights. It was rented for almost every kind of theatrical exhibition, and, after the affairs of Palmo's estate became slightly out of chaos, it was occupied by various companies, some of them of considerable merit.

William E. Dinneford leased this house and opened it April 7, 1845. It was at this theatre that George Vandenhoff and his sister attempted to revive the classic tragedy of "Antigone," with a fac simile of a Greek theatre and stage, and Mendelssohn's music. A new Grecian procession was painted, and a double stage erected, after a model of a Grecian theatre. A very large audience listened intently to the play, but soon grew weary of the monotony of the dialogue and the absence of change in scenery, notwithstanding the stray gems of the great musical composer. The piece would assuredly have proved a failure, when a wag in the pit brought matters to a serious consummation. A messenger, dressed as a soldier, with shield upon his arm, mounted upon the stage, and, kneeling before the king, delivered messages of about five words in length. After performing this caper some dozen times he finally mounted the stage, and delivered this awful piece of intelligence: "My lord, Autogone is dying." The messenger's shield had been decorated with alternate rings of black and white, after the manner of a target. There he was kneeling, with this weapon, occupying the centre object of the stage, when an inveterate chewer, evidently a practiced hand, flung a quid of fine cut plumb on the centre of the target—a shot clean to the bullseye—such a display of sharp shooting as William Tell might envy. This piece of wagery brought down the house, and the absurdity of the entire piece burst upon the audience, who hailed the descent of the curtain with unrestrained mirth and laughter. Notwithstanding the business as very bad, it was played for twelve nights. The chorus of forty people, representing sages of Creon's Court, presented a very grotesque appearance, and slightly upset some of the characters the first night. The wigs and beards for these Grecian Sages were made out of long white and gray goat's hair. During the Summer of 1846 Christy's Minstrels had possession, making their New York debut Aug. 22. James H. Hackett leased this house in the Fall of 1846. Mlle. Blangy danced here. Messrs. Chippendale and John Sefton were engaged to manage it by a Mr. Smith, who had a carpet store on Broadway, and the season was one of the shortest on record—one night only. Jan. 4, 1847, an Italian opera season was inaugurated, and "Linda di Chamounix" was presented for the first time in America. This season terminated March 31. April 9 commenced another season of Italian opera, but this season lasted only until June 7, 1847.

Aug. 11, 1847, John Sefton assumed the management, opening 16 with the Ravens and a dramatic company. Dec. 15 Mme. Augusta took the house for German ballet and vaudeville. The season ended in January, 1848. W. E. Burton then leased the house, rechristened it BURTON'S CHAMBERS STREET THEATRE, thoroughly renovated and reconstructed the building and dedicated it anew on July 10, 1848. As Burton's it was famous for eight years following, when Burton left it to go to his new theatre (Broadway, opposite Bond Street), afterward the Winter Garden. After Burton gave up the Chambers Street house it had various managers and reverses of fortunes until 1857, when the house ceased to become an amusement resort. Its site is now occupied by the American News Company's building.

THE OLD BROADWAY THEATRE (1847).

The original projector of this establishment was Thomas S. Hamblin, but, just as he was about commencing operations, the Bowery Theatre, then under his management, was destroyed by fire, involving him in a loss of $100,000. Col. Alvah Mann then commenced the erection of it, and, after spending $14,000, was obliged to call in the aid of Mr. Raymond in order to complete the building. The lot upon which this theatre was built was on the east side of Broadway, between Pearl and Anthony (now Worth) Streets, at what are now known as 326 and 328 Broadway. It would accommodate 4,500 persons, having seats for 4,000. It was 75 ft. 2 in. high in front, and had three tiers of boxes, a parquet and a gallery. Three rows of benches were set aside in the latter for the accommodation of colored persons. It was one of the best arranged places of amusement in the city, and was modeled after the Haymarket Theatre, London, Eng. When he first opened here Ethelbert A. Marshall, the manager, was partial to English actors, but it was not long before many American actors were found among his co-ps dramatique. Here Edwin Forrest and W. C. Macready won their greatest laurels. The initial performance took place Sept. 27, 1847. The company consisted of Fanny Wallack, Rose Telbin, Miss Winstanley, Miss Carman, Mrs. Hild, Helen Matthews, Henry Wallack, John Lester (Wallack), Thomas Lynne, J. M. Dawson, Thomas Vache, Henry Hunt, C. W. Hunt, Mesdames Watts, Bernard, Sarreant and Chapman, Miss Gordon, Miss Fitzjames, George Vandenhoff, G. Chapman, H. Bernard, J. Evvard, Dennison, William Fredericks, E. Shaw, J. Bernard, J. Kingsley, J. Walters, Thompson, Allen, and Miles, St. Clair and Celeste. Alvah Mann, proprietor; G. H. Barrett, acting and stage manager; W. E. Anderson, prompter; J. M. Trimble, architect; J. R. Smith and G. Heister, scenic artists; Andrew J. Allen, costumer; Samuel Wallis, properties; Mr. Galbraith, stage carpenter and machinist. The initial performance was "The School for Scandal." The afterpiece was "Used Up." J. E. Murdoch opened an engagement here Dec. 6, 1847. Mme. Anna Bishop sang in opera 13. S. Lover, the Irish wit, appeared 28 until Jan. 13, 1848. E. A. Marshall became joint manager Jan. 24, and W. R. Blake was engaged as stage manager Feb. 21. D. C. Anderson opened an engagement March 20. John Brougham made his first appearance April 17, in his own play, "Romance and Reality." Mann & Marshall dissolved partnership Oct. 25, 1848, and the business of the firm was closed up by Mr. Marshall. Edwin Forrest opened Aug. 28, 1848. On Dec. 25, 1848, "Monte Cristo" was first acted in America, John Lester Wallack as Edmond Dantes. It ran fifty nights. C. W. Coudock made his American debut here Oct. 8, 1849, supporting Charlotte Cushman. Kate Bateman made her New York debut, Dec. 10, 1849.

McKean Buchanan's debut occurred June 10, 1850, and was a fiasco. William Davidge's American debut took place here Aug. 19, 1850, in "The School for Scandal." Mme. Ponisi's New York debut was made Nov. 16, 1850. F. B. Conway made his American bow here Aug. 19, 1850. Feb. 24, 1851, saw the American debut of Julia Bennett Barrow, and May 21, 1851, the New York debut of Eliza Logan. On June 30, 1851, D. W. Waller made his American debut as Hamlet. Other memorable debuts made here were: Dec. 15, 1851, G. V. Brooke's first in America; Dec. 29, 1851, Lola Montez's first in America; Dec. 13, 1852, Caroline Riching Bernard's first in New York; Dec. 27, 1852, Alboni's first in America; Oct. 9, 1854, Louisa Pyne's first in America; March 2, 1855, Mrs. E. L. Davenport's first in America; March 12, 1855, Eloise Bridges' first on any stage; Jan. 31, 1858, James Melville's (rider) first in America.

E. A. Marshall closed as manager May 1, 1858. Edward Eddy took the house Aug. 18, 1858, and ran it until April 2, 1859, when it closed forever, with a benefit to Mr. Eddy. The building was afterwards demolished.

ASTOR PLACE OPERA HOUSE (1847).

The scene of the famous Macready riot was the Astor Place Opera House—a well located, very neat and convenient theatre, near to the main arteries of the city, with a fine open front and an excellent ventilation. It was capable of seating 1,800 persons in the parquet, dress circle, family circle and gallery. Its failure ultimately, as a theatre, can be legitimately traced to the Macready riot. It was opened Nov. 22, 1847, by Sanquirico & Patti, with the opera of "Ernani," embracing in the cast the following artists—their first appearance in this country: Teresa Truffi, Adelindo Veltti, Antonio Avignone, S. Rosi, Angiola Mora, Felix Genevesi and Severo Strini; Antonio Barili, director; John Sefton, acting manager, and Sig. Biondi, stage manager. This place had been erected by subscription, but the first season was unprofitable, and closed in April. William Niblo secured the theatre for the Summer in 1848, and gave ballet, farce, opera, comedy and tragedy, ending Oct. 25, after a very successful season. June 12, 1848, all the scenery was sold at sheriff's sale, and purchased by E. P. Fry. After an absence from New York of three years, W. C. Macready reappeared here Sept. 4, 1848, under the management of Chippendale & Sefton. He opened as Macbeth. The engagement closed Sept. 25. William Niblo was lessee of the house. Donizetti's "Roberto Devereux" was first sung in this country Jan. 15, 1849. The first benefit the American Dramatic Fund Association ever had was at this theatre, Feb. 8, 1849.

Niblo & Hackett were the next managers, and they announced a return of Macready, to open May 8, 1849, for four weeks. The initial performance was not given on that date. On 9, J. H. Hackett appeared. On 10 Macready was billed for Macbeth. The theatre that night was mobbed, and the Astor Place riot took its place in history. Macready escaped unharmful, and on May 22 sailed from Boston for England. He never afterwards visited New York. The Opera House, from the Fall of 1849 to its auction sale June 12, 1850, was either leased or managed, in turn, by Charles Bass, Max Maretzek, Prof. Anderson, S. S. Sanford, F. S. Chantreau and C. R. Thorne Sr. The Clinton Hall Association then acquired the property for the Mercantile Library, and, remodeled, it was occupied until 1890, when a new library building was erected on the site.

THE OLD NATIONAL THEATRE (1833).

This house was situated at the southwest corner of Leonard and Church Streets. It was opened originally as the Italian Opera House, by a stock company, who had purchased the site at a cheap price, Nov. 18, 1833, with the opera of "La Gazza Ladra." The admission was $2 for sofa seats, $1.50 for the boxes, $1 for the pit and 75 cents for the gallery. The arrangement of the house was a novelty to this country. What constituted the parterre in other houses was in this divided into three parts. The one (parquet) facing the orchestra was occupied by those who studied comfort and sought not to be annoyed by the close proximity of the instruments. This retreat communicated with the first tier of boxes. The pit was sufficiently spacious and accommodating. Projecting from the front boxes was a circle, or amphitheatre, for the accommodation of those who were not with a party. On each side of the pit were the windows of the baignoires, or private boxes, for the abbi tant. These private boxes had entrances from the lobby, with gilt lattices and curtains, chairs, carpets, tables, etc., where refreshments or a petite souper could be served, and the ear and appetite gratified at the same time. The dress circle did not differ from those of other theatres. The second tier was divided into twenty private boxes. The six centre boxes were decorated in a style of princely magnificence. The third tier communicated with the pit. Every tier of boxes had a separated saloon; that in the second was 75 feet in length by 20 in breadth, and communicated with the lower tier by a large and elegant staircase. As to the convenience of the company, nothing was neglected. There were fifteen good sized dressing rooms with fire places, which communicated with the stage by means of galleries. The stage was very large, and afforded every facility for grand spectacles; the dome was magnificent beyond description. The building cost $110,000, the ground lot costing, besides, $65,000. Being situated in an inconvenient and poor neighborhood, it was never a popular resort, and its fortunes were uniformly disastrous. The first season continued with several cessations until July 21, 1834, the performances being entirely of Italian opera. A supplemental season followed, beginning Nov. 10, 1834. A cessation of the season occurred Dec. 23, and, being afterwards resumed, continued until May 15, 1835, without any memorable event occurring, save the appearance of Julia Wheatley, in the opera of "Edwardo and Christina," this being, we believe, the first attempt of an American lady to sing in Italian opera. The house was crowded at each performance and the association expected large returns. Alas for human hopes! The house had been liberally "papered," and when the accounts were balanced the gentleman who had so freely paid down their money found that their profits were less than the figure 0. Indeed, they had to produce even more cash to meet deficiencies.

At the conclusion of the season, which had proved a most disastrous one, the theatre was leased by Henry Willard and Thomas Flynn, who opened it as The National Theatre, Aug. 29, 1836. The inaugural play was "The Merchant of Venice," cast chiefly as follows: Shylock, Junius Brutus Booth, the elder; Bassanio, Andrew Pickering; Lorenzo, Plummer (who afterwards became a negro minstrel); Launcelot, Thomas Placide; Portia, Mrs. Flynn; Nerissa, Clara Woodhull; Jessica, Mrs. Conduit. The remaining piece was "The Man With the Carpet Bag," in which, as Grimes and Wrangle, William Mitchell and Charles D. S. Howard made their first appearances in America. Charles Saint Thomas Burke made his first appearance in this city at this house, Sept. 3, 1836, when, in his fifteenth year, he acted the Prince of Wales in "Richard III." Mme. Celeste produced the ballet of "The Maid of Cashmere, or le Dieu et la Bayadere" here, for the first time in America, Oct. 3, 1836. It took the town by storm. Willard & Flynn retired from the management March 6, 1837. Oct. 15, 1836, a benefit was gotten up for Thomas Hamblin. The price of tickets was two dollars each, admitting the bearer to all parts of the house, and the receipts were upwards of three thousand dollars. This theatre was sold at auction in November, 1836, for $75,000, and purchased by Mr. Mauran, a merchant of this city, and James H. Hackett, and they leased it to James W. Wallack. J. W. Wallack opened for the season Sept. 4, 1837, with "The Rivals." Ben De Bar came from New Orleans and joined the company. Mrs. William Sefton (Ann Duff Waring, afterwards Mrs. J. W. Wallack Jr.) joined the company Oct. 24, 1837, making her first appearance as Emilia to Wallack's Othello. Miss Missouri made her first appearance on the stage at this house in April, 1838, as Alice in "Ernest Maltravers." Her full name was Louisa Missouri Miller, and she was a sister to Josephine Clifton. Edwin Forrest starred here from Sept. 3 to 22, 1838. J. W. Wallack opened 24 and Mme. Celeste 27. Edward Seguin made his American debut here, as did Mrs. Hardwick, Josephine Stephan, Mme. Hazard, James Browne, Mrs. Seguin, Mr. Freer and others.

The theatre was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon, Sept. 23, 1839. The building was the joint property of Washington Coster and Mauran. James W. Wallack Sr. was the lessee and owner of all the "properties." The fire originated in the gas room beneath the stage. James W. Wallack immediately engaged Niblo's Garden, and for a short but unprofitable season gave dramatic performances there, closing Nov. 18. In 1840 this house was considerably altered, remodeled after Niblo's Garden, and reopened June 29 with a concert. There was a wooden promenade, and many colored lanterns. Alex. Wilson was the manager. He opened Oct. 12, 1840. Bad times soon brought its first season to a termination, and ended Mr. Wilson's connection with the place. W. E. Burton became the next manager, and here made his first metropolitan essay of the kind, which might have proved successful had not the theatre been destroyed by fire for the second time. Mr. Burton opened April 13, 1841, with "The Naid Queen." F. C. Wemyss was stage manager. Charlotte Cushman played the Queen, and commanded the female warriors. On 20, the Ellis Brothers made their American debut as "The Lionards." This was followed by the tragedy, "The Grecian Queen."

An attempt was made to destroy this theatre by fire, May 28, 1841. It was discovered about six o'clock in the evening. Fire was found in eight different places, and under such circumstances as to leave no doubt that the whole was a wicked attempt to destroy this beautiful edifice. A second and successful attempt was made May 29, 1841. At the close of the performance of May 28 Mr. Burton, with Mr. Wemyss and Mr. Russell, remained on the premises until about half past three, and had a thorough search through every part, and it appeared perfectly safe. Mr. Russell then retired to his room in the theatre, and went to bed. He rose after six o'clock, went to the stage door in the rear of the building and stood in conversation with the private watchman of the establishment. While thus occupied something was seen to fall from one of the upper rooms, and in a very few moments flames were seen to proceed from several different parts of the building. The alarm was instantly given, but so rapid was the progress of destruction that it was with difficulty Mr. Russell rescued his wife, who was in bed. Not a vestige of the wardrobe was saved. The rear wall and the side wall on Franklin Street both gave way in so short time after the fire began that it was by the mercy of Providence alone that numbers were not crushed to death in the adjoining houses. The mortar all fell from the bricks, and the latter looked as clean almost as when new; and the whole building went down to the ground in less than one hour, except part of the front wall and the side wall on Leonard Street.

CASTLE GARDEN (1822).

This historic amusement resort was formerly an old fort, perfectly round, and about 1,200 feet in circumference. The whole building was covered with a lofty dome, supported by light, Gothic pillars. Castle Garden, situated on a mound of earth in front of the Battery, was originally known as Castle Clinton. It was erected by the general government in 1807. It was built out nearly 300 yards from the mainland, being connected therewith by a drawbridge of stone and wood. During the establishment of more efficient defences in the harbor, it was ceded, in 1822, to the city. In 1824 it was leased to private individuals, and converted into a place of amusement. Round the whole fort ran a deep gallery, supported by massive stone pillars, with room enough to seat six thousand persons; and, when crowded, ten thousand persons could be stowed within its walls. The stage was located on the north side of the garden, and fairly jutted out into the audience part of the building. In 1826 the interior resembled a fanciful garden, tastefully ornamented with shrubs and flowers; the lower promenade exhibited a beautiful panoramic view, painted by celebrated artists and decorated with marble pedestals and busts, representing the four seasons of the year and the different quarters of the globe. The busts were imported from Italy, and were the work of celebrated sculptors. Elegant entrances were made into the saloon, which opened for the convenience of the company. The bars were supplied with choice liquors, confectionery, ices, etc. In the evening the garden was lighted with gas in a most brilliant and novel manner. An excellent band was engaged. In fact, no pains or expense were spared to make this the most splendid place of public amusement in the world. During the season brilliant exhibitions of fireworks were given. The price of season tickets for families was $10, which admitted at all times (benefits excepted) one gentleman, any number of ladies not exceeding six, and children of said family under 14 years. Season tickets to admit one gentleman and two ladies, at all times (benefits excepted), $5. Admittance to non-subscribers, 12½ cents, except on exhibitions. About 1839 the fort came into private hands on a long lease, and Richard French, the original proprietor of French's Hotel, was the lessee. He associated with himself a Mr. Heiser, and they proceeded to change the appearance as much as possible. Castle Garden was planted with trees, turf and flowers. Where once barbettes guns frowned over the parapets, shady walks were arranged, and the garden was illumined at night with lamps and transparencies. The interior was cleared out, and the warlike aspect of the structure took on a more peaceful appearance. For many years this cosy and delightful spot was the favorite resort of the people, for in those days the fashionable part of town was below Chambers Street. There was a band of Ethiopian singers, etc., there in 1845 and 1846, consisting of Billy Whitlock, Charles White, Dan Gardner and Barney Williams. But finally the garden became deserted. Mr. French built his hotel, and Castle Garden underwent another change about 1847, this time becoming an opera house or large concert hall.

French & Heiser opened it June 28, 1847, for a summer season with a dramatic company, which included George Holland, Chas. M. Walcott, Arnold, Herr Cline, Miss Clarke, Mrs. W. Isherwood and others. John Cline was a daring and skillful performer on the slack wire. Aug. 8, the Havana Opera Co. commenced a season. They alternated with other entertainments. The season closed Sept. 26, with a benefit to the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum. It was reopened June 5, 1848, with Geo. Holland as the dramatic director, and the company included George Andrews, John Nickinson, Baker, Roebr, G. Clark, W. B. Conover, Mrs. Vernon, Miss Pray, Charlotte Nickinson, Mrs. Phillips and the dancers, Mme. Augusta and Mons. Bouvary. The Havana Opera Trompe began a season June 8, 1850, which lasted until Sept. 7. The company—one of the strongest that had appeared in this city up to that time—included Signors Marini, Salvini, Lorini, Vietti, C. Badiali, Luigi, Vieta, Coletti, F. Badiali, Signorinas Bosio, Steffanone, Tedesco, Caroline Vieta and Elisa Costini, with Arditi and Botesini as conductors. On Sept. 11, Jenny Lind gave her first concert in America, under the management of P. T. Barnum. The sale of tickets for the first concert took place on Saturday, Sept. 7, 1850. The proprietors of the Garden saw fit to make the usual charge of one shilling to all persons who entered the premises. Yet 3,000 persons were present at the auction. One thousand tickets were sold on the first day for an aggregate sum of $10,141. Five thousand persons were present at Jenny Lind's debut. The reception that was accorded to Jenny Lind was never before equaled in the world. As Julius Benedict led her towards the footlights, the entire audience rose to their feet and welcomed her with three cheers. She was called three times before the audience. The gross receipts from her first concert amounted to $17,864.05. For the second concert $14,203.03. The third concert took place Sept. 17, and the receipts were $12,519.20. The orchestra consisted of sixty musicians. Of Jenny Lind's half receipts of the first two concerts, she devoted $10,000 to charity in New York, the Widow and Orphans' Fund of the Fire Department receiving $3,000. The receipts for her fourth concert were $14,266.09; fifth concert, $12,174.74; sixth concert, $16,028.39.

Max Maretzek commenced a Summer season June 23, 1851, of Italian opera, with the artists who had been giving Italian opera at Astor Place Opera House. Season tickets were issued for the Summer at $15 each, which admitted to all representations, benefit nights alone excepted. The admission was 50 cents. One of the most remarkable entertainments ever given in this city was a complimentary benefit tendered to E. A. Marshall at this place Aug. 12, 1851. Mr. Marshall was manager of the Broadway Theatre, this city, and the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. On Aug. 23, Signora C. Vietti took a benefit, when "Lucrezia Borgia" was given for the first time in New York. On Sept. 1 "Norma" had its first representation here for the debut of Mme. Rose De Vries. Max Maretzek took a benefit Sept. 4. The performance commenced at 3 P. M., and concluded at 11. The programme was a long and attractive one, and was as follows: Opera of "Norma," Sig. Costini as Adalgisa; Sig. Bettini, Pollione; Sig. Beneventano, Orovoso. A ballet entertainment by the Rousset Family, the comic farcetta called "My Friend Jack," with John Brougham as Nonpareil, Mr. Lynne as Col. Detonator, H. B. Phillips as Sir Jacob Lukewarm, Mr. Palmer as Chas. Mowbray, Fletcher as John and Miss Tayleure as Emily Lukewarm. The second act of "Lucrezia Borgia," in which Sig. Benedetti made his first appearance in three years. Sig. Rosi played the Duke, Signora Truffi-Benedetti Gennaro. The fifth part of the programme was a miscellaneous concert, in which Mme. Bertucca Maretzek, Sig. Arditi, Sig. Lorini, Miss Whiting and Sig. Colletti appeared. This was followed by the entire opera of "I Puritani"—Sig. A. Posio, Elvira; Sig. L. Salvi, Arturo; Sig. C. Badiali, Riccardo; Sig. Marini, Geogio. The tickets were $1 each, admitting to all performances, afternoon and evening. The receipts were about $5,000. The season closed Sept. 19.

Jenny Lind's farewell concert in America took place here May 24, 1852. There were 7,000 persons present. She sang a "Farewell to America" in the same spot upon which she sang her greeting. The words of the "Farewell" were natural, simple, and a beautiful expression of regretful farewell. The song was received with quiet applause, and without enthusiasm. As she sang it she turned to face every part of the hall, and with clasped hands she ended. She was recalled after retiring, and, advancing with her husband to the front, she bowed for the last time, where she had bowed for the first, in America. Not a flower fell at her feet. But a sudden gust of enthusiasm seized the public heart, and hats were waved and hurrahs shouted as she withdrew for the last time. June 7 the Rousset Family commenced a Summer season. July 25 French & Heiser opened with a miscellaneous entertainment. Prof. Henry and son, acrobats, and Herr Cline were the chief attractions. July 30 the four Sisters Rousset took a benefit. July 30 there was a benefit for the Montreal fire sufferers. French opera comique, vaudeville and ballet made up the programme. Mme. Hilarious, from the Paris Opera House, made her first appearance in America. Aug. 4 the French Opera Comique Co. sang "Les Diamants de la Couronne," and the four Rousset Sisters appeared in a ballet divertissement. Aug. 20 "Ne Touchez pas a la Reine" ("Hands Off the Queen"), was presented. The performance Aug. 30 was for the benefit of the sufferers by the Montreal fire. Sept. 2 the Ravels took a benefit. On 4 a military musical festival took place, afternoon and evening, in aid of the Musical Fund Society of New York, when the military bands of New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Troy appeared.

What was called a "grand dramatic festival in commemoration of the introduction of the drama in America, in 1752, one hundred years ago," was given here in aid of the American Dramatic Fund, Sept. 6, 1852. The National Guard Band gave a series of promenade concerts, commencing June 15, 1853. The seventy-seventh anniversary of our glorious independence was made a gala day July 4. Likeoon's Tung Hook Tong Chinese Co. appeared for this night only. They appeared in "The Coronation of the Emperor" and as Japanese tumblers and Chinese Tartars. Comic singing and dancing, a display of fireworks, and the entertainment terminated with a ball. July 11 a brief season of Italian opera commenced. One dollar was charged to all parts of the garden. July 13, Signora Stefani made her first appearance here since her return from Mexico, in "Norma." July 15, the President of the United States (Franklin Pierce) attended a performance of "Robert le Diable." July 16, a benefit performance took place for the relief of the unfortunate Chinese Dramatic Co., and July 21 a second benefit in their aid took place. On 9 William Fleming had a benefit. The sixth annual benefit of the American Dramatic Fund Association took place Aug. 11. On Aug. 12 the opera troupe appeared in "The Barber of Seville," with Sontag as Rosina. Max Maretzek took a benefit Aug. 23, when "Lucrezia Borgia" commenced at 4 o'clock. Then an intermission of one and one half hours took place for promenade and refreshments. At eight o'clock "Lucia di Lammermoor" was given. M. Jullien commenced a series of concerts Aug. 29, assisted by Anna Zerr and others. He continued one month. The opera season closed Sept. 19. June 2, 1854, a fancy and full dress ball was given here, under the direction of M. Jullien. The whole of Jullien's concert orchestra and soloists appeared in the ballroom. Single tickets of admission, admitting lady or gentleman, cost $3 each; family tickets, admitting gentleman and two ladies, $5. The balcony was reserved for those who did not wish to participate in the dancing, and the tickets to which were $3. June 11, H. R. Conklin commenced giving Sunday evening concerts. Another season followed of Italian opera under the baton of Max Maretzek. Verdi's opera, "Louisa Muller," was given for the first time in America July 20. Grisi and Mario were brought to this country by Jas. H. Hackett, and made their American debut Sept. 4, 1854, Maretzek having closed his regular season Aug. 24, on which occasion he and his wife took a benefit. Sig. Beraldi took a benefit Aug. 25. An auction sale of tickets took place at Castle Garden for the opening night (of Grisi and Mario) on Sept. 1. No charge was made for admission to the Garden during the sale, as was done when the Jenny Lind sale took place. At least 15,000 persons were present. The first ticket was purchased by Mrs. (now the Baroness) Furdett Coutts, a wealthy lady from England. The sale continued for at least two hours, the tickets going at rates varying from fifty cents to $2.50. A great many tickets at $1.50 to $1.75 premium were sold to music stores, speculators and others, in lots of twenty to one hundred, while the average to private individuals was from two to six tickets. The initial opera was "Lucrezia Borgia," with Grisi as Lucrezia, Mario as Genaro and Susini as Duke Alfonso—their first appearance in America. An auction sale for the second representation took place at the Garden Sept. 5. The attendance was meagre, and the enthusiasm was of small account, the bidding being slow. Two or three seats were sold for premiums, realizing from $5 to $7.50, and the bidding fell off to a dollar, and from that to a shilling. After the second concert it was discovered that the public would not pay the prices of admission, and on Sept. 8, for the third concert, it was announced that the uniform price would be $3, and that there would be no auction sale of seats, and no premiums charged on seats. The promenade tickets were $1. Sept. 11 "Norma" was sung, with Signora Donovani as Adalgisa—her first appearance in America. The season closed Sept. 29, with "I Puritani," as the Fall was too far advanced to admit of performances in the exposed area of Castle Garden. A season of equestrian performances was inaugurated Oct. 23, 1854, with J. Vanderbilt as manager and James M. Nixon as equestrian director. Two performances were given daily. The season terminated Nov. 25, 1854. In May, 1855, Castle Garden was closed as a place of amusement, and was taken possession of by the Commissioners of Emigration as an emigrant depot. On May 23, 1870, it had a narrow escape from destruction by fire, but the flames had not got sufficient headway before the arrival of the firemen to prevent them extinguishing the fire, which they did after a loss of $3,000 was occasioned. It was finally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon, July 9, 1876. It took fire about 5.30 o'clock, and in less than half an hour it was a heap of charred ruins. The walls alone were left standing.

NIBLO'S GARDEN (1828).

In early years, say 1800, a circus and training ground for race horses, called the Stadium, was established on the northeasterly corner of Broadway and Prince Street, New York City. The site was a portion of the old Bayard farm, and was purchased by S. Van Rensselaer for $15,000. Shortly after the war of 1812 the inclosure was used as a drilling ground for militia officers. Early in 1823 the Columbian Gardens, devoted to Summer night entertainments, occupied the site, and many singers, dancers and specialists of that day appeared there. On July 4, 1827, the Sans Souci Theatre came into existence on this spot, the manager and proprietor being Mr. Giffert, and the opening performance consisting of "The Hundred Pound Note," with George Barrett, W. B. Chapman, Mrs. Barrett and others in the cast. The season terminated, however, on Aug. 19, 1827. William Niblo established here a restaurant and the garden bearing his name, in 1828. May 18, 1829, he opened his concert saloon, but later still he erected the first Niblo's Garden, a very pretentious and handsome theatre. Joseph Jefferson and John Seiton, with a company, appeared here during September, 1837. Sept. 3, 1833, James W. Wallack leased the house, opening with his company on Oct. 1 following. The season of 1842 opened June 2, when the Ravens gave "Mazulm, the Night Owl," for the first time in America. On Aug. 9, 1843, E. L. Davenport made his first New York appearance. Sept. 15 to 23 Italian opera was offered. June 21, 1844, John Dunn ("Rascal Jack") made his first appearance in America. Mrs. W. H. Crisp, an actress of note in that day, was seen for the first time in America on Oct. 13, 1845. She was the mother of Harry Crisp and the present Georgia Congressman. On July 7, 1846, Mlle. Blanguese, French dancer, was seen for the first time in this country. The Ravens performed Sept. 17, 1846, and on the morning of the 18th the theatre was entirely destroyed by fire. The flames spread rapidly, and in a short time the whole block, bounded by Broadway, Prince and Crosby Streets, was consumed. The Ravel family were very heavily losers.

It was three years later, July 30, 1849, before the new (or second) Niblo's Garden was thrown open to the public, with Chippendale & Seiton as managers, and the Ravens as the opening stars. Aug. 13 Paul Brilliant and Josephine Berton made their American debut. John Brougham succeeded Mr. Seiton in the management May 13, 1850.

On Sept. 18, 1851, Mme. Anna Thillon was heard for the first time in this country, singing in "The Crown Diamonds"—its first performance (in English) in America. "The Corsican Brothers" was initially produced in this country June 8, 1852, with G. V. Brooke as the Dei Franchi twins. On Aug. 30 Charles Wheatleigh made his American debut as Doricourt in "The Belle's Stratagem." Henrietta Sontag, she of world wide fame, accomplished her American debut in Italian opera Jan. 10, 1853, when the prices were advanced from fifty cents to two dollars and one dollar. The theatre was enlarged, improved and redecored early in 1854. On June 3, as Pauline in "The Lady of Lyons," Anna Cora Mowatt took her leave of the stage, to a $6,000 house—an audience rarely since duplicated in money or in brilliance. Rachel, the French tragedienne, appeared Nov. 12, 1855, and played one week. Dan Reed's Equestrian Co. occupied the house in the Spring of 1858. Mary Devlin (afterwards the first Mrs. Edwin Booth) made her New York debut June 22, 1858, playing Juliet to Charlotte Cushman's Romeo. James W. Collier's first New York appearance occurred at this house during 1859, and for five seasons he was in the stock here as leading juvenile. William Niblo retired from the leasehold of Niblo's Garden in May, 1861. A. T. Stewart, owner of the property, devoted that Summer to beautifying and improving the place. A new stage was a conspicuous alteration. The reopening, Jan. 7, 1862, was by the Wallack-Davenport Co. Fanny Davenport's first New York appearance as an actress occurred here on Feb. 14, 1862, as Charles I in "Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady," the occasion being E. L. Davenport's benefit. J. E. Roberts produced his version of "Faust and Marguerite" on Dec. 22, 1862. On Jan. 19 "Leah" (Aug. Daly's version) was originally acted by Kate Bateman, and on March 20 "Aurora Floyd" (Charles Gayler's dramatization of the novel) was initially performed by Matilda Heron. Sept. 1, 1863, saw the first New York presentation of "Narcisse," with D. E. Bandmann in the title role. Felicia Vestvali ("The Magnificent") made her first appearance in English drama Sept. 29, 1863, and on Nov. 2 Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" was first acted at this house, with Edwin Forrest, John McCullough, L. R. Shewell and J. G. Burnett in the chief roles. Chas. Gayler's "Connie Soongah" was first performed on any stage Jan. 11, 1864, and ran five weeks. On March 28 Edwin Booth played "The Fool's Revenge" for the first time in New York, his support including Rose Evinge, Ada Clifton, J. W. Collier, B. T. Ringold, J. W. Blaisdell, E. B. Holmes, J. Nunan, C. De Forrest, Mary Wells and Mrs. Reeves.

"Arrah-na-Pogue" was first acted in America July 12, 1865, and ran nine weeks. Sept. 12, 1866, was made memorable by the first production on any stage of Charles M. Barras' spectacle, "The Black Crook." Its great success need not be detailed here. It had a run of 475 consecutive performances, lasting until Jan. 4, 1868, and it was several times afterwards successfully revived. No ballet spectacle before or since "The Black Crook" has placed so many representations to its credit. It made a fortune for its author and for Wheatley, Jarrett & Palmer, then Niblo's managers. "The White Fawn" followed, and was performed 175 times without interruption. The triumph of these two spectacles gave to Niblo's its first fame as a home of great pictorial productions. On July 20, 1868, Offenbach's "Barbe Bleue" was sung for the first time in America. On Aug. 31 of this year William Wheatley retired from the management of Niblo's, being succeeded by Jarrett & Palmer. On Aug. 2, 1869, in a revival of "Arrah-na-Pogue," Dominick Murray made his first American appearance. "Little Em'ly" was first acted in New York Dec. 20, following, with Ione Burke in the title role. Jan. 10, 1870, saw the American debut, jointly, of Charles Fechter and Carlotta Leclercq in "Ruy Blas." On Jan. 7, 1872, a benefit to Matilda Heron realized $5,390.

May 6, 1872, Niblo's Garden was burned for the third time. In less than two hours all save the Crosby Street walls were placed in ashes, and the total losses amounted to several hundred thousands of dollars. The house was rebuilt and rededicated Nov. 30, 1872, and the present Niblo's Garden, with such alterations as time has necessitated, is the result. The opening attraction, under Jarrett & Palmer's management, was the spectacle of "Leo and Lotus," which had 123 performances. April 28, 1873, Lulu, the boy gymnast (then supposed to be a woman), made his American debut. May 1, 1874, Jarrett & Palmer's lease terminated. C. R. Thorne Sr., the next lessee, opened the house May 25, 1874, with "The Lady of the Lake." Mr. Thorne's venture failed, and Imre and Bolossy Kiralfy next assumed the managerial reins, opening Sept. 7, 1874, with "The Deluge." Early in 1875 the house closed, and remained in darkness for a long spell. On Sept. 18, 1876, it was opened again, by John McCoole and Chas. E. Arnold, with "Baba," in the cast of which was Eliza Weathersby (first wife of N. C. Goodwin Jr.). The season closed Dec. 9, and on Dec. 25, 1876, the Kiralfys resumed control and held it until March 10, 1877, when darkness once more fell upon Niblo's. April 2, 1877, it started again, this time with Benson Sherwood as manager and "Anthony and Cleopatra" as the play. W. J. Fleming next assumed control, but retired Dec. 17, 1877, and a brief season of Italian opera ensued, with little success. Gardiner & Bache then assumed a lease from March 18, 1878, at $22,500 a year. Aug. 17, 1878, they were ejected for failure to pay the rent. E. F. Starin was the next lessee. On March

THE CRYSTAL PALACE, New York, 1853.

29, 1879, J. H. Haverly and E. G. Gilmore became the managers, opening with the Kiralfys' spectacle, "The Enchantment." Sept. 29 the Davene Family made their New York debut. On March 29, 1880, J. H. Haverly became sole lessee and manager. Jan. 12, 1881, "The Black Venus" was acted for the first time in America. Mr. Haverly retired from the management in 1882, and John F. Poole and E. G. Gilmore took the helm on Aug. 21, 1882. Since then the house has been used as a straight combination theatre, though several pretentious spectacular productions have been given by the Kiralfys at various intervals. On Jan. 1, 1892, Elmer E. Vance assumes the management by a sub-lease from Mr. Gilmore.

THE SECOND PARK THEATRE (1821).

The first Park Theatre known in American history was situated in Park Row, about two hundred feet north of Ann Street, on the lots now numbered 21, 23 and 25. It had a frontage of 80ft., a depth of 165ft., and was built by a stock company. It was dedicated on Jan. 29, 1798, Hallam & Hodgkinson being the lessees and managers. The opening bill consisted of "As You Like It," "All in a Bustle," "The Purse" and an address by Mr. Hodgkinson. During the Summer of 1798 Mr. Dunlap managed it, but he retired in 1805. "The Honeymoon" was first acted in America at this theatre May 29, 1803. George Frederick Cooke, the great tragedian, made his American bow there Nov. 21, 1810, to a house containing $1,820—pretty "good money" in any era. Mr. Cooke, be it noted, was the first male star that ever toured America. On May 25, 1820, after a performance of "The Siege of Tripoli," the Park was destroyed by fire.

On its site arose the second Park Theatre, and the one that has furnished American theatrical annals with some of its most distinguished events. We cannot in our limited space follow the career of the Park through all its changes and reverses, but we may at least note a few of the more brilliant occurrences. The new house, which was dedicated Sept. 21, 1821, retained the dimensions of the old one, and ran back to "Theatre Alley," which yet holds its historic name. The theatre had seven doors, opening into a commodious vestibule, and was lighted with three chandeliers and patent oil lamps, the chandeliers having thirty-five lights each. The house was elegantly painted and furnished, and the "drop" was an equestrian picture of George Washington. Price & Simpson, who last managed the first Park, were in control of the new Park. The opening performance consisted of a prize address, by Charles Sprague; "Wives as They Were, and Maids as They Are," a comedy, and "Therese," a drama. John Banim's drama, "Damon and Pythias," was first performed here on Sept. 10, 1821, with Mr. Maywood as Damon. On Oct. 5, 1821, as Richard III, Junius Brutus Booth, first and greatest of his name, made his bow to a New York audience. On Nov. 12, 1823, "Home, Sweet Home," was first sung in America. William A. Conway made his American debut as Hamlet during the season of 1823-4. The season of 1825-6 was made memorable by performances by Cooper, Kean, Hamblin, Hackett, Forrest, Conway, Hilson and others. Edmund Kean's first reappearance in New York occurred Nov. 14, 1825, as Richard III, and was the occasion of a great disturbance, arising from a violent partisanship. Italian opera was first introduced into America on the Park's boards, Nov. 29, 1825, with "Il Barbiere de Siviglia" as the opera and Sig. Garcia (father of the renowned Milbrán) as the conductor. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was acted for the first time in America Nov. 7, 1826, and Barnes and Hackett did the Two Dromios in the "Comedy of Errors" Oct. 25, 1821. Clara Fisher (who is still in active harness, as Clara Fisher Maeder) made her American debut at the Park Sept. 11, 1827, as Albina Mandeville, in "The Will." On Oct. 2, 1826, W. C. Macready made his American debut as Virginius, playing to $1,680 and scoring a success.

During the season of 1828-9 engagements were fulfilled by J. W. Wallack Sr., Mme. Celeste, Clara Fisher, Maywood and other then popular stars. Von Weber's opera, "Oberon," was first heard in this country Sept. 3, 1828. Edwin Forrest was a star on Oct. 17, 1829, and on Nov. 15 he produced "Metamora" for the first time on any stage. The first version of "Rip Van Winkle" was acted here April 22, 1830, with J. H. Hackett as Rip. Sept. 1, 1830, saw the first New York appearance of Charles Kean, and Joseph Burke ("the Irish Roscius") made his American bow Nov. 22 following. The famous and first Ravel Family were memorable stars during the season of 1832-3. Fanny Kemble's debut occurred Sept. 18, 1832, as Bianca in "Fazio." "Fra Diavolo's" first performance in America was on June 20, 1833, with Peter Richings as Beppo. Tyrone Power, the Irish comedian, made his initial bow to an American audience Aug. 28, 1833. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood commenced their American engagement here Sept. 9, 1833, in "Cinderella." During the Summer of 1834 the Park was entirely renovated. Dec. 4, 1834, as Beverly in "The Gambler," Charles Kemble Mason made his American debut, to a packed house. Mrs. Shaw (afterwards Mrs. Thos. S. Hamblin) made her American debut as Mariana in "The Wife," July 25, 1836. Mme. Augusta's debut as a dancer is recorded as having occurred Sept. 16, 1836. Ellen Tree (afterwards Mrs. Charles Keane) was seen as Rosalind in "As You Like It" on Dec. 12, 1836—her first performance on any American stage. Her triumphs in classic roles are still talked of. James E. Murdoch, who is still hale and hearty, and occasionally appears as a reader, made his debut at the Park during the season of 1838-9, playing Benedick in "Much Ado about Nothing." Andrew Jackson Neafie's first appearance on any stage was made as Othello during the season of 1833. Mr. Neafie is today engaged in the real estate business in New York City, and is wealthy. William Creswick, the celebrated tragedian, made his first appearance in America on Aug. 31, 1839, as Claude Melnotte in "The Lady of Lyons." On Sept. 9 following Beethoven's "Fidelio" was first performed in this country. Fanny Ellsler, of delightful memory, made her first pas before American spectators on May 14, 1840, when she took the town by storm with "La Cracovienne" and "La Tarentule." John B. Buckstone, whose sons, J. C. and Rowland, are on the stage of this day, made his bow here Aug. 17, 1840, in his own comedy, "Single Life." On Jan. 8, 1841, Manager Simpson, of the Park, migrated with his company to the Franklin Theatre. June 1 following the Park's scenery, dresses, decorations, etc., were sold for $18,000 arrears of rent due to John Jacob Astor and Henry Beekman. But Mr. Simpson was plucky enough to try again. Leasing the house for a year (to expire June 8, 1842), he reopened it June 19, 1841, for a Summer season, with Fanny Ellsler as the star. On Oct. 11, 1841, "London Assurance" was first acted in this country, Charlotte Cushman being the Lady Gay, Charles Fisher Max Harkaway, and Wheatley Charles Courtley. On Oct. 4, 1842, Mr. and Mrs. John Brougham made their debut here. James R. Anderson's first American appearance occurred, Sept. 2, 1844, as Othello. With W. H. Crisp as Sir Charles Coldstream, the comedy of "Used Up" was acted for the first time in this country, Jan. 9, 1845. March 24, of the same year, saw the performance of Anna Cora Mowatt's "Fashion"—a notable "society" theatrical event, and perhaps the best one up to that date. Thomas S. Hamblin succeeded Mr. Simpson in the management of the Park, opening it Sept. 4, 1848, with himself as Hamlet. On Dec. 16, 1848, the theatre was destroyed by fire. Mr. Hamblin's loss was about $25,000. Thus passed away the most celebrated of the early American theatres. The only remembrance of its former position is the name, "Theatre Alley."

THE CRYSTAL PALACE (1853).

This unique resort was located in Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street, and was inaugurated July 14, 1853. It covered five acres. Its sides were composed of glass, supported by iron. June 15, 1854, there was "a musical congress." M. Jullien was the conductor. This artist took a benefit here and made his last appearance in America June 26. Oct. 31 the place was closed. During the removal of the goods and the sales by auction visitors were admitted at twelve and a half cents each. This edifice started in its delicate beauty from the earth like the "magnifying of happy vision. Viewed at a distance, its burnished dome resembled a half disclosed balloon, as large as a cathedral, but light, brilliant and seemingly ready to burst its bands and soar aloft. Nothing like this building, in shape or size, material or effect, was ever before, or since has been seen in America. It was two stories high. The first was in the form of an octagon, the second a Greek cross. The centre of this was a dome 148 ft. high. The four corners of the octagon were furnished each with two towers, 70 ft. high. These towers supported flagstaves. The construction of the building was similar to that of the original in London. The main building covered 173,000 square feet, galleries included, and the additional building 33,000, being 206,000 in all. The additional building was composed of a first and second story, gallery, 2 ft. broad and 45 ft. long, lighted from above, the sides being closed up, so as to form a suitable place to exhibit pictures and statues. This additional building was connected with the main one by two one story wings, which contained the refreshment rooms and the mineralogical departments. There were twelve stairways, the balustrades of which were light iron tracery. The stairways were at each point of the compass, at the sides and under the dome. Walls, properly speaking, the building had not, being enclosed with glass sustained by iron pillars. This mass of crystal occupied 45,000 square feet. The cast iron weighed 1,200 tons, the wrought iron 300. Each pane of glass was 16 by 38 inches. The prevailing style of architecture was Moorish and Bazantine in its decorations. The ceilings were painted in octagons, in blue, white, red and cream color. Greenough was the decorative artist. There were three entrances to the Palace, all alike, one on Sixth Avenue, one on Fortieth and one on Forty-second Street. Each entrance was 47 ft. wide, the central nave 41 ft. wide, and the aisles 54 ft. wide. The dome was 100 ft. across. Though not nearly as large as that of London, the building was superior in architectural beauty. The plans were given in July, accepted in August and operations commenced in November. There were about 6,000 contributors, 6,000 specimens of the superlative genius and industry of all nations. The twenty-ninth annual fair of the American Institute opened here Sept. 15, 1857. The Committee on Lands and Plans of the Board of Aldermen, at a meeting, April 2, 1856, decided to report adversely to the petition asking an extension of the Crystal Palace lease. The original lease was granted for five years, and had till Jan. 13, 1857, to run. Several owners of property in the vicinity of the Palace appeared before the committee, and remonstrated against an extension of the lease. The ground of their remonstrance was that they bought their lots from the Corporation at public auction, under the representation that the ground occupied by the Palace was to be laid out as a public park. It was destroyed by fire Oct. 5, 1858. The site is now called Bryant Park.

BARNUM'S ANN STREET MUSEUM (1842).

On Dec. 27, 1841, Phineas Taylor Barnum purchased Dr. John Scudder's American Museum collection, and removed it to the building corner of Broadway and Ann Street. Mr. Barnum agreed to pay $12,000 in seven equal instalments, and so economical was he that in less than one year he paid every cent of the sum. One of his first successes was the Fejee Mermaid, in August, 1842. Jan. 2, 1843, he purchased the collection of the New York (known as Peale's) Museum, which he removed to his museum. He introduced to the public in December, 1842, Charles S. Stratton, afterwards famously known as Tom Thumb. He was advertised as eleven years of age. Mr. Barnum had what was termed a Moral Lecture Room, where dramatic performances were given. In 1844, the company consisted of Caroline Chapman, Mrs. Phillips, George Chapman, Maria Barton, Great Western (father of Lucille and Helen), John Dunn, Barney Williams, Billy Whitlock, Luke West, the Martinetti Family and many others. Wm. B. Harrison, the extemporaneous singer, appeared here this season. He was a popular comic vocalist. In 1848 Mr. Barnum bought the collection of the Chinese Museum, Philadelphia. William R. Goodall made his first appearance in this city at this house in June, 1850, as Edward Middleton in "The Drunkard." Emily Mestayer was the leading lady here during the seasons of 1851-2-3. The season of 1852-3 commenced Aug. 30, with John Greenwood as assistant manager, and C. W. Clarke director of amusements. The local moral prize drama, entitled "The Orphan's Dream," was presented. Emily Mestayer delivered an opening address. The company was as follows: C. W. Clarke, T. Hadaway, J. Henkins, A. Andrews, Sefton Parry, Chas. Warwick, Sylvester Bleeker, Martin G. Clark, Jas. Conner, Charles Van Kleecker, Livingston, Pierrepont, Marden, Whitman, Simpson, Thomason, the Misses E. Mestayer, M. Augustin, Mortimer (now Mrs. Louisa Eldridge), Granice, Gladstone, Alderman, Marshall, Morton, Goldthwaite, Colevolini, Jackson, Kate and Ellen Adair, Dodge and La Petite Taglioni. April 25, H. F. Daly made his first appearance in his native city, for the benefit of C. W. Clarke. H. J. Conway's version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was produced here Nov. 7, 1853. Adjoining the Museum was the Chemical Bank. When they left it, Mr. Barnum erected on the site a building that he added to his museum, and in it was the Lecture Room. For the season of 1857-8, Harry Watkins was the director of amusements, and produced his drama of "The Pioneer Patriot." This piece was the turning point in the drooping fortunes of Barnum's Museum. For three seasons prior to the production of this exciting drama the receipts had become very discouraging to Mr. Barnum. "The Pioneer Patriot" was a great go, and Mr. Barnum decided to take advantage of the public excitement and "catch the crowd while it was coming," by giving two performances daily. This was the inauguration of the twelve daily performances for the first time in the history of the drama. For weeks "The Pioneer Patriot" packed the old Museum, while few houses in the country were making expenses during those trying times of 1857-8. "The Pioneer Patriot" was followed by "The Bride of an Evening," "Valentine and Orson," "Jessie Wharton," "Our Country's Sins," etc., all from the pen of Harry Watkins, who managed the theatre, and acted twice a day. During the season of 1857-8 Mrs. Louisa Eldridge became a member of the company. She appeared as Nancy Strap in "The Pleasant Neighbor;" she was there three seasons. Thomas A. Hadaway was in the company at this time. He had been living in retirement for some time, on his farm at Long Island. He was induced to emerge from that retirement, and for fifteen years was one of the greatest favorites ever seen on this stage. He was an excellent actor, and is at present one of the oldest living Thespians, having been born in 1801. The dramatic season of 1860-1 was inaugurated Sept. 10. E. A. Taylor was the stage manager, and in the company were Joseph E. Nagle, Geo. H. Clarke, W. L. Jamison, E. Hayland, Messrs. Bridgman, Brown, Jardine, Cooke, Geo. Brookes, Hughes, Hadaway, Chapman, De Forrest, Anderson and James, Mrs. R. France, Mrs. J. J. Prior, Agnes St. Clair, F. France, H. Alford, H. Walby and Douglas. The opening production was "Joseph and His Brethren," followed by "Rose Elmer," "Massaniello," "The Magic Well,"

CASTLE GARDEN, New York, 1852.

INTERIOR OF CASTLE GARDEN, 1852.

"Smiles and Tears, or the Lear of Private Life," "The Lady of St. Tropez," "Love and Elopement," "The Woman in White," "Gitanelli," "The Patriot's Dream," etc. The season closed with a benefit to E. A. Taylor, July 8, 1861. The season of 1861-2 opened Oct. 7. E. A. Taylor was stage manager, George Heilge, scenic artist; Charles Burns, machinist; W. Wilson, gasman; W. L. Peterschen, musical director; J. E. Nagle, Hadaway, Bridgman, W. L. Jamieson, George Brooks, E. Haviland, G. H. Clarke, H. Cunningham, H. E. Chapman, Hughes, Rigby, Anderson, Brogan, Thomas, Debois, Thorning, Mrs. J. J. Prior, Mrs. R. France, Mrs. Le Brun, and the Misses C. Alford, Le Brun, Jenny Walters, Rosa France, Addie Le Brun, Harriet Walby, McCormick, Wilson, Jackson, Larkin and Davis were of the company. The initial production was "Great Expectations," by Geo. L. Aiken. This play ran until Oct. 12, when it gave way to "The Angel of Midnight." Dec. 3, "The Earl's Daughter," a new romantic drama, was presented. Dec. 24, a Christmas spectacle called "Undine, or the Spirit of the Waters," another version of "The Naiad Queen," took its place, and was followed in turn by "Sadak and Kalasrade," "Hop o' My Thumb" and "Adelaide of Dresden." The regular season closed on July 5, and on the 7th a Summer season of light operas, by the Holman Opera Troupe was given for four weeks, when the season terminated. The next season opened Sept. 8, with the production of "Claude Marcel, or the Idiot of Tarbes." Samuel A. Emery made his American debut March 30, in "The Shadow on the Wall." Failing to meet with the success he anticipated, he returned to England the following September. The season closed July 4. A Summer season was inaugurated Aug. 3, 1863, with Corson W. Clarke as director and Sylvester Bleeker as stage manager. In the company were Milnes Levick, T. J. Herndon, J. Bridgman, R. G. France, Harry Cunningham, W. Daly, W. M. Holland, J. Petrie, J. Henry and S. Jeffard; Mrs. J. J. Prior, Mrs. R. G. France, the Misses Jenny Walters, S. Graham, J. Francis, F. France, Louise Carman and Mlle. Louise, danseuse. The principal productions of the season were "Raffaele the Reprobate," "Still Waters Run Deep," "Diamond Cut Diamond," "Away With Melancholy," "The Haunted Chamber," "Quite at Home," "A Wife for Half an Hour" and "Only a Penny." The season closed Sept. 12, with "The Drunkard," for C. W. Clarke's benefit. The next season was inaugurated Sept. 14. E. F. Taylor was stage manager; F. W. Peterschen, musical director; W. H. Daly, prompter; George Heilge, scenic artist; Charles Burns, machinist; Robt. Cutler, property man; Thomas Wilson, gas engineer, and Robert Walker, costumer; J. E. Nagle, W. L. Jamieson, T. Hadaway, Louis J. Mestayer (first appearance here), E. Haviland, W. Holland, H. Cunningham, Hughes, Frank S. Finn (first appearance here), F. Wood, Laws, Thompson, Eden, Anderson, John Bridgman, John Flood and W. H. Daly; Mrs. J. J. Prior, Mrs. France, and the Misses C. Alford, J. Flood, Olive Priestly, Carrie Monell, Harriet Walby, Lizzie Fleming, Addie Le Brun, Sarah Germaine, Thompson, Ward, Johnson, Laing and Wood comprised the company. Oct. 5 D. L. Morris commenced a brief engagement, and was followed in succession by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gomersal (Nov. 9), and Major Pauline Cushman June 4, 1864. The season closed July 9, and was followed by a season of pantomime, in which Tony Denier, C. K. Fox, G. C. Davenport, M. A. Gross, J. M. Hughes and Mlle. Louise and Ernestine appeared, lasting until Sept. 10, 1864. The last season of this house commenced Sept. 12, 1864. E. F. Taylor was stage manager; J. M. Hughes, prompter; F. W. Peterschen, musical director; C. Burns, machinist; R. Cutler, property man; R. Walker, costumer; George Heilge, scenic artist; and F. Wilson, gas engineer; Milnes Levick, Louis Mestayer, W. L. Jamieson, J. Delmon

Grace, F. Bridgman, E. Haviland, T. Hadaway, B. C. Porter, Tony Denier, R. J. France, Harry Cunningham, Anderson, Stevens, Hunter and Bebu, and Mrs. J. J. Prior, Mrs. J. D. Grace, Mrs. Kook, Mrs. France, Mrs. W. Jamieson (formerly Miss C. Alford), and the Misses J. Cleaver, H. Walby, Carrie Monell, Le Brun, Thompson, Law, Germain and Anson. C. W. Taylor's Masonic drama, "The Signet Ring of King Solomon," was the opening production, and "Waiting for the Verdict" followed.

On the night of Nov. 25, 1864, an attempt to destroy this house by fire was made. The Museum was on that evening unusually well filled, and the performances had been pleasantly preceded with up to about nine o'clock, when one of the most diabolical sacrifices of human life and property ever attempted came near being successfully perpetrated. While the attention of the audience was being wholly occupied by the performers, an employee of the Museum observed a sudden flash of fire at the foot of the stairs, and in a moment the whole floor was discovered in a blaze. Instantly a cry of fire was raised, startling every one and causing the most intense excitement. Almost before any one could get out the fire had been extinguished; but this did not seem to allay the fear, and the men, frantic with excitement, slid down the iron pillars from the upper tier, while several women were only with the greatest effort prevented from leaping headlong into the parquet. Dec. 25, "The Ring of Fate" was presented. Jan. 23, 1865, the patriotic drama, "The Union Prisoner, or the Patriot's Daughter," was given. Feb. 6, "Azucena, or the Gypsy's Oath." Feb. 20, Laura Keane's "Workmen of New York" was presented, and March 20, J. B. Studley appeared in "William Tell." "Maremma of Madrid" followed April 3. Henry Leslie's English sensational drama, "The Orange Girl," was first played in this city April 20. Early in May the Boone Family were engaged for the matinees, and on the 22d Emile Melville was seen in "The Heiress of the Hidden House," a dramatization of one of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth's novels. She afterwards appeared in "Dot, or the Cricket on the Hearth," "The Daughter of the Regiment," "Jenny Lind at Last" and other pieces. The last week of the season commenced on July 3, and terminated July 8 the closing dramatic representations being "Eustache Baudin." From April 16 until the 26th, in common with the other places of amusement, the dramatic performances were suspended, on account of the assassination of President Lincoln. On July 3 "The Broken Sword" was presented. Among the curiosities in the building were a portion of the historical Charter Oak of Connecticut, a horse and rider turned into stone, Prof. Hutchings, the lightning calculator; Woodroffe's Troupe of Glassblowers; the fat woman, Rosina Richardson; Annie Levan, the giantess; Prof. Livingston and Mme. Lacompé, astrologer.

The season terminated July 8, 1865, but the house was reopened July 10, for a Summer season, with a pantomime troupe, consisting of C. K. Fox, Tony Denier, Master Timony, M. Leon Chenat, M. Grossi and Mlle. Auriol (now Mrs. Tony Denier). "The Green Monster, or the White Knight and the Giant Warrior," was the initial pantomime, which continued until noon of Thursday, July 13, when the building was entirely destroyed by fire. The alarm was given about a quarter before one o'clock, and the conflagration spread with great rapidity. The flames were first discovered in the basement of the establishment, and, owing to the combustible nature of its contents, the building was soon wrapped in flames. Destruction ran rampant until nine buildings were demolished, involving a loss of over a million of dollars. In three quarters of an hour the Ann Street wall fell outwardly, and half an hour later the Broadway end came down with a sound like the roar of distant artillery. At 2.30 the last of the walls fell in.

A TRIO OF SPORTING EXPERTS.

E. D. FULFORD.

This celebrated wing shot, who created the unprecedented score, all circumstances considered, when he defeated that other famous expert, Captain Brewer, with a score of one hundred birds killed in succession, is a New Englander by birth, hailing from Long Hill, near Bridgeport, Ct., where he first saw the light of day on Feb. 2, 1862. In height he stands 5ft. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ in., and his ordinary weight is 172lb. His first match of any importance at peppering pigeons was shot against C. M. Hedden, of Newark, N. J., at John Erb's grounds, and took place on April 5, of the present year. Fulford proved the winner, shooting his opponent out on the ninety-third bird. He next met and defeated Frank Class, the champion of New Jersey, in a match for \$250 a side, the loser paying for the grounds and birds, on May 2, 1891. His next engagement was with Captain Brewer, they shooting three matches, each for \$200 a side, at Marion, N. J., in November. Each match was at one hundred birds, Fulford winning the first with a score of 100 to his antagonist's 99, he taking the second also, the score standing 99 to 98, and the third being won by Brewer on a shoot off at twenty-five additional birds, after they had tied on 94.

JOHN D. MACPHERSON.

This professional athlete is known on both sides of the Atlantic and throughout the United States and Canada, having been before the public during the past nine years. He is a native of Prince Edward Island, is of Scotch parentage and was born in 1865. His physical measurements are as follow: Height, 6ft.; chest, 42in.; upper arm, 13in.; forearm, 12in.; thigh, 24in.; calf, 16in.; weight in condition, 180lb. His first appearance as a professional athlete was made in a match with K. Kerr, at Lucknow, Ont., in 1883, for $200, which he won, putting the light stone 44ft. 6in. His general ability as an athlete was strikingly shown at the Caledonian games at Kintail, Ont., in May, 1884, when he won the 100yds. sprint, putting both light and heavy weights, the standing broad, standing high, standing hop, step and jump, three standing jumps and the pole vault, his performances at each being most creditable. With the exception of the run, he repeated this feat, also improving upon his previous performances. Since then he has confined himself almost altogether to shot putting, at which he has defeated all the best known Caledonian athletes in games year after year, also winning matches from S. Spence, E. N. Harrison, J. L. Taylor, R. Dunbar, C. Raitts, Hugh Bowman, D. A. McMillen, C. Perry and Charles Currie, the then champion of Canada. The latter match was with different weights, for $500 and a gold medal, and was decided at Toronto, Ont., Nov. 10, 1888, Macpherson taking three of the four events and, of course, winning. He is also an expert boxer and no slouch at catch as can wrestling. Last year he visited Scotland, and in the course time in which he appears in the picture competed at a number of the prominent Caledonian field meetings, winning everything that he contended for, in some instances eclipsing previous records there.

PHIL CASEY, Handball Champion.

On another page is given the picture of Phil Casey, the world's champion at handball, who is represented in a characteristic attitude in the act of making an underhand stroke at an approaching ball. Casey, who was born about forty-five years ago in Ireland, has successfully during the past quarter of a century maintained his supremacy as champion at his native country's national game. Phil Casey's first match game of any note was in 1868, when he won the championship of the United States, unexpectedly defeating Barney McQuade, the then champion, in four consecutive games. Since that date Casey has had an unbroken record of victories, never having been defeated in any match in which money was at stake. We have only space to give a few of his many victories, all of which have been achieved in the most faultless style. In 1872, with James Everett as partner, Casey defeated James O'Brien and Wm. Foley, of Chicago, in six out of nine games played at Chicago and Brooklyn, for $1,000 a side. Casey, in 1874, played single handed against Judge and McGrannigan, two of the best players in Philadelphia, and beat them badly, notwithstanding they had also the advantage of playing in their own court in Philadelphia. Another crack player of the Quaker City, Frank Burke, was decisively defeated in 1880, when each player was limited to using his right hand only. The fact that Burke did not win a game in Philadelphia or Brooklyn satisfied him that Casey could use either hand equally as well. In 1887, Casey, although he had virtually retired several years previously, consented to play John Lawlor, of Dublin, Ire., a match—the best eleven out of twenty-one games—for the championship of the world and $2,000. The first ten games were played at Cork, Ire., Aug. 4, 1887, when Lawlor won six games to four, Casey being considerably handicapped by the large court, combined with want of practice. The concluding contests of the series took place Nov. 29, 1887, at Brooklyn, it being the occasion of the opening of Casey's new court, at 297 Degraw Street, in that city. Without any extra exertion Casey then defeated Lawlor seven straight games, thereby winning the world's championship, a title he still retains. Competent critics say that there never has been Casey's superior as a player, either in the past or the present. Since 1868 he has been ready to play any one who disputed his supremacy, and during that time he has played matches at San Francisco, Sacramento, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis and Montreal, in addition to those above mentioned. Casey, who is over six feet in height and weighs one hundred and eighty-five pounds in trim, combines remarkable strength and activity with wonderful skill and judgment, and is yet a formidable antagonist at handball.

HEROES OF THE PRIZE RING.

MEMORABLE BATTLES ROYAL BETWEEN HEAVYWEIGHTS OF OLD.

COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER ANNUAL FOR 1892.

It is hardly necessary to say that the Prize Ring is an institution that owes its origin to the hardy sons of Great Britain, a race noted from time immemorial for their devotion to outdoor pastimes and exercises. For many years it was cherished by even the higher classes, for the reason that it served to foster that spirit of manly courage and self reliance which is among the leading safeguards of a nation, and served to promote a love for athletic exercises the practice of which called for the possession of pluck, physical strength and stamina, which are national characteristics of that people. Their love for the institution has not grown cold, although it is true that the methods at present practised by the devotees of the ring and their patrons are somewhat different from those in vogue during what the old timers delight to refer to as "the halcyon days of the P. R." The object generally sought to be attained—a settlement of the question of superiority by a fair and manly passage at arms in which the weapons provided by nature alone figure—is precisely the same as in the olden time. The exponents of the art are in the main actuated by the same motives, the difference in the methods that now prevail from those of former years being partly due to a change in public sentiment, but, in greater degree, to the persistent opposition of those goody-goody persons of puny physique who cannot see anything but brutality when two thoroughly trained, well mated and able bodied men, uninfluenced by feelings of hostility toward each other, meet for the purpose of demonstrating the physical superiority of one over the other. Were it in the power of these persons to prevent it, even the perfectly innocent pastime of sparring in public with big gloves would be prohibited, they being utterly unmindful of the self evident benefit accruing from a knowledge of the science of boxing as a means of personal protection, thus unwittingly throwing the weight of their influence in favor of the use of deadly weapons for the purpose of self defence. Fortunately for the public at large, however, this class of would be reformers are greatly in the minority, and it is unlikely that the once cherished prize ring will ever become entirely a thing of the past. The masses in both England and America are today quite as much interested in the doings of the Knights of the Fives as they were in the days of Figg and Broughton, Spring and Cribb, Donnelly and Cooper, and other old time stars of the "squared circle," and the result of matches between prominent pugilists is awaited nowadays quite as eagerly as in the days when the titled nobles of the "tight little isle" were wont to elbow one another at the ring side. Whatever may be said detrimental to the ring by its opponents, wherever a love for outdoor sports and admiration for personal prowess are implanted in the breasts of the people, there will ever be found a fondness for that branch of manly competition which is so true a test of a man's courage, endurance and acquired skill, and from the ranks of whose exponents sprang a member of Parliament and a United States Congressman. Next to witnessing an actual contest within the ropes, the patrons of the P. R. derive pleasure from perusing accounts of well fought battles, and with this fact in view we have made a resume of some of the reports of the more important and sensational battles royal between celebrated pugilists of the old school, now laid at rest, a feature of this issue of THE ANNUAL. Although more than thirty years have elapsed since the last of these battles was contested, so intense was the excitement created by them at the time that the remembrance of them still lingers fresh in the memory of those now living who witnessed them, while those who have since arrived at man's estate have gained more or less knowledge thereof from their elders. Scarcely a week passes that we do not receive one or more queries from correspondents regarding one or the other of these memorable contests, and with a view to enlightening the present generation, as well as to refresh the memory of our older readers, we present full details of each contest, so that all may become thoroughly posted.

TOM HYER AND YANKEE SULLIVAN'S Famous Battle for the Championship of America and $10,000.

It was not until the nineteenth century was far advanced that the prize ring obtained a permanent foothold on the soil of the new republic of the West. The seed once properly sown, however, the plant grew rapidly—as was but natural, considering that the same sap that gave life and strength to the parent tree also nourished the sturdy sapling—gaining strength year by year until its branches extended far and wide, and fistie fruit was abundant. After the lapse of a number of years a change came, the blighting influence of the pugilistic army worm was felt, and the tree ceased to flourish as of yore; but, being of hardy growth, it managed to survive the ravages of its enemy, has of late years given evidence of renewed vitality, and now bears fruit of better quality and in greater quantity than the stock beyond the Atlantic from which it sprung. The doings of the earlier exemplars of the art in America are shrouded in darkness, there being in those days no zealous P. R. historians to preserve the records of the performances of those who practised the game of knuckles. It has come to be an accepted fact that the first encounter of a pugilistic nature having any claim whatever to the distinction of being classed as a prize fight, it being conducted according to rule, was a match between Jacob Hyer and Tom Beasley, both of them large, powerful men, and the former a butcher by trade. Several severe rounds were contested, when Hyer had the misfortune to fracture an arm, mutual friends interfered, the combatants shook hands and were ever after staunch friends. We mention this affair chiefly for the reason that one of the principals was the father of the first recognized champion of the American prize ring—Tom Hyer, whose memorable battle with that tough importation from the land of black-thorns, "Yankee" Sullivan, whose real name was Frank Ambrose Murray, first demands our attention. This battle was pre-eminent in the early history of the American prize ring, and seldom, if ever, since has so unequal a combat been so savagely waged. The importance given to it by reason of the prominence of the principals, the fact that the stakes, $5,000 a side, were much larger than had ever before been contended for in any country, and the terrific style of fighting marking the contest, served to link together inseparably the names of the combatants, who from having been bitter enemies before the fight afterwards became sworn friends. The experience and knowledge gained by Sullivan by previous engagements here and in England, over Hammer Lane, Vince Hammond, Tom Secor, Professor Bell and Bob Caunt, and the victories he achieved over them, made "Sully" the pet of the Hibernian element in this city, even then very strong, and the houses he kept in Division and Centre Streets constituted the headquarters of that faction. Hyer, who was a native of the metropolis, was looked upon in sporting circles as the leader of the American division of the fancy, and the jealousy manifested by Sullivan toward him was intensified when Hyer thrashed "Country" McClusky in an offhand fight a few miles up the Hudson River, Sept. 9, 1848, the loser having been Sullivan's right hand man. The feeling between the rival parties ran high, and one evening they happened to meet in a saloon at the corner of Broadway and Park Place, when Sullivan, who was slightly under the influence of liquor, insulted Hyer, who gave him a sound beating therefor. This brought matters to a focus, Sullivan issuing a public challenge, which was accepted, with the proviso that the stakes be $5,000 a side (which shows what a high strung fellow Hyer was), to which Sullivan and his backers were at first inclined to demur; but so anxious was Yankee to "get at" Hyer, whom he really believed he could easily beat, that the proposal was agreed to, and a match was made at the headquarters of Hyer, Ford's Tavern, 28 Park Row.

The pugilists of those days were liable to have their plans upset the same as those of the present time, and when the excursionists arrived at Baltimore they found that the authorities had blocked their game. Both principals got to the spot agreed upon, however, only to be chased away by the police, when a change of locale became necessary. After a long sail in a couple of pinnaces a landing was made at Rock Point, Kent Co., Md., where good quarters were secured for the principals, the weather being bitterly cold, while they were waiting for the making of the ring. The ropes and stakes having been left in position at Pool's Island, others had to be improvised, which was done by using sharpened pine billets for stakes, around which were stretched the halyards from one of the vessels. The frozen, snow clad ground was cleared and spaded, and everything was made as snug as possible before the men were summoned to the ring. Hyer had for seconds Tommy Burns and Joe Winrow, while Johnny Lyng and Country McClusky were the attendants of Sullivan. Henry J. Colton and J. J. Way officiated as umpires, the position of referee being filled by Samuel Van Nostrand.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Sullivan darted toward Hyer, who stood resolutely awaiting him with his body well forward and in formidable readiness, and, coming up to him with a sort of run, Sully let fly with his left at the head, but did not get it in. He then got away from a short attempt to counter with his left, but Hyer followed the effort with an instant discharge of his right in Sullivan's forehead, which made a long abrasion of the scalp, but which, notwithstanding the power of the blow, showed neither blood nor discoloration at the time. Gathering himself for a return, Sullivan then rushed in at the body, and, after two or three ineffectual exchanges, clinched his antagonist with the underhold and struggled for the throw. This was the great point on which was to depend the result of the fight. Sullivan relied mainly for success upon his superior wrestling, and it was calculated by his friends and backers that a few of his favorite cross buttocks would break his young antagonist in his lithe and graceful waist, and not only render him limpsy with weakness, but stun him with the falls. The most terrible anxiety, therefore, existed as to the result of this endeavor. In its fierce agitations the spectators, who stood in an outer ring of plank laid over the snow some feet distant from the ropes of the arena, involuntarily rushed forward and swarmed against the ropes. Two or three times did Sullivan knot his muscles with an almost superhuman effort, but all served only to postpone his overthrow; for, when he had spent his power by these terrible impulses, his iron adversary wrenched him to the ground with the upperhold, and fell heavily prone upon his body. This decided the largest part of the outside betting in favor of the upper man, and shouts of the most terrific joy went up for Hyer. The depression of Sullivan's friends was equal in degree, and they began to get an inkling that they had underrated their opponent.

2. As soon as time was called both men hurried to the scratch, Hyer working to the upper slope of the ring, where stood the judges and the referee, and thus slanting the sun between his body and that of his opponent, instead of taking its beams directly in his eyes. As Sullivan came up this time, the blood from the scratch upon his forehead made crimson confession of its severity, and elated the friends of the tall one with shrieks of first blood for Hyer! Sullivan at this hosanna rushed desperately in, and, meeting Hyer where he paused to receive his charge, delivered a heavy blow with his right on Hyer's left eye, taking a counter on his opposing ogle in return. Sullivan kept close up, and both kept striking with the rapidity of two cocks as they fly together, rendering it almost impossible to see where or how the hits were discharged. It was evident, however, that the rally had not been attended with serious effect to either side. A feint from Sullivan and a dodge from Hyer intervened, when another rally followed, Sullivan taking in return for a couple of body blows two severe discharges on the left eye by a sort of half upper cut with the right hand, which brought the blood again. Sullivan then rushed in and clinched; he caught the underhold again, but his efforts were naught, and he was twisted to the ground as if he had been a man of grass, his huge antagonist falling upon him, as before, with his entire weight. Shouts for Hyer.

3. The hopes of Sullivan's friends were now fading fast, and, indeed, he seemed impressed with the idea that he was overmatched. He looked at his opponent with a sort of wild astonishment as he came up, but with a desperate courage, as if conscious nothing but the most reckless policy could help him; he rushed up to the scratch, and gathering cautiously, after a wicked pass, he softened his apparent intentions with a feint, but, finding that Hyer would not be drawn out, he let fly right and left, and, catching Hyer with the latter blow upon the body (some say the neck), staggered him backwards a couple of steps and brought him to a sitting position on the ground. The shouts now went up on Sullivan's side, and amid the uproarious glee he went smiling to his corner.

4. Both came up this time with the utmost alacrity. Sullivan encouraged by his success, and Hyer showing the utmost eagerness to get even. Sullivan hurried up and led off, without getting in, and Hyer, in his excitement, not only returned short, but open handed. This excited the attention of the former's backer, who, while on the point of crying out: "Now you've got him, Jim," discovered that Sullivan was open handed, too. The warning, however, brought both of them to their senses and made them close their fists. Hyer then hit out left and right, executing with the latter on the old spot and taking a body blow in return. Sullivan then ran in and clinched, but his hold did him no good, for he was thrown in the same manner as before, Hyer falling on him and lying across him for several seconds, until his henchmen could come slowly and take him off.

5. Sullivan, who had suffered considerably in the last round by his eagerness to improve the advantage he had gained in the third, led off with the same reckless spirit and with the same desperate aim. He struck wildly right and left at the head, but, getting stopped, next tried the body. His incautiousness, however, received a heavy punishment in the shape of a tremendous right hand paizan on the left eye, which hit him down upon his hand, with one knee touching the ground. Hyer rushed forward to hit again, but, checking himself, he raised his hands as if afraid of being tempted to a foul blow, and, moving backwards, turned towards his corner. As Hyer had turned away Sullivan, apparently wild, arose and recommenced the round, whereupon Hyer turned upon him and pressed him by main strength to the ground.

6. Sullivan now began to show his punishment and fatigue in a slight nervousness of his legs; but still he ran boldly up for desperate fighting, as game as a pebble, and as resolute as if the battle was still within his reach. Several rapid exchanges were then made, Sullivan catching it on the right eyebrow in a counter to a body hit. Hyer then fought Sullivan to the ropes, and bent him backward over them. Some sharp flogging took place, which, proving rather unpleasant for Hyer, he seized Sullivan and threw him and fell on him, with his arm across his neck. He remained in this position for some time, without the interference of his seconds, who saw that it was to his advantage.

7. Sullivan, breathing short and exhibiting much fatigue, came up the same as ever, and Hyer, as before, stood on the slope to forbid his passage one inch upon his ground. The little man, as he approached his huge antagonist, seemed as if dispirited by the decision of the referee, while he was nearly spent with the severe exertions that he had made to hit and get away. But he hit with no effect, while the blows of his antagonist made the blood flow profusely down his face, although they had really less effect upon the unfortunate left eye than it seemed. Several exchanges were made, all against Sullivan, when he rushed in again at his wrestling hold, and found the ground, as he had done in these close encounters every time before.

8. The hit in the eye which Hyer received in the second round now showed its colors, and puffed up over the surrounding flesh. Sullivan's left eye was no better; indeed, worse, and bore many testimonials in crimson crevices of Hyer's black and long knuckles. Sullivan again made play from the jump, but got nothing in. As he hit out at the body, Hyer struck short with the left, as was his custom every time when he meditated mischief with his right hand, and then let go with his dexter mawley, driving the blood out from the left eye in gory spray, but still not knocking his staunch opponent down. Sullivan, finding that he could not parry off these terrific hits, ran in again, but was thrown as before, Hyer falling on him, and lying with his breast across Sullivan's chest, neck and face. Hyer's seconds were again slow in coming up to take him off.

9. Both came up bloody, Sullivan being literally clotted with gore, while the clear crimson smoked on Hyer's chest from a lance wound which had been made under his right eye to prevent it closing out his sight. Sullivan walked up to the scratch with freshened vigor, and showed the same determination as when he commenced the battle. Hyer, who was cool and apparently unfatigued, at once saw the real condition of his man, and, concluding that it was now time to change his tactics, led off for the first time. The Yankee seemed better capable of resisting this mode of warfare than making a successful aggression, and dodged two wicked looking blows, but in endeavoring to return with a rush he brought Hyer to his usual defensive position. He then took Sullivan's blows without wincing or endeavoring to stop them, being satisfied to take advantage of the right hand counter, which from the first had told with such terrible effect. Sullivan rushed in again to save himself from punishment, and was thrown, with Hyer on him.

10. Sullivan came up with his hands open and showing distress. He led off with ineffectual passes, which only served to provoke punishment, and give him the return of a wicked right handed hit in the old place, which staggered him to the ground.

11. Hyer, strong on his pins, resprings regularly and evidently in possession of all his strength. He waited for

Sullivan as before, and, though Yankee came up rather slower than before, Hyer was content to await his approach, rather than alter a method by which he was getting on so well. On meeting at the scratch a few rapid hits were made, which ended in a clinch and a wrestle to the ground, Hyer uppermost, but with Sullivan's leg locked over his until he was taken off.

12. This time both men came up quick, and Sullivan led off, hitting wildly and madly right and left, while his cool antagonist, watching his chance, took a short hit for the privilege of countering on the old spot. Sullivan, then rallying his energies, tried the Secor dodge, endeavored to slip under Hyer's right arm to hit him from behind, but he was stopped and caught by Hyer with the left on the top of the head with a round blow, which discharged him to the ground.

13. Up to this time all the fighting was done in Sullivan's corner, making Hyer's boast good that he should not have an inch more than twelve feet to do his fighting in. This round commenced by sharp exchanges right and left, as if they had come together for the first time. At length Hyer, finding it was all his own way, rallied Sullivan sharply, and, driving him to the ropes, backed him over them, and entered into a smart exchange of flibbing. Hyer caught hold of the ropes while thus engaged, when a man from Boston, by the name of Hennessy, seized his thumb, and bent it backwards from its hold, whereupon Hyer let go, and clinching Sullivan, wrenched him to the ground and fell upon him.

14. Sullivan giving out fast; Hyer, perceiving it, entered briskly on the offensive, fought him to the ropes and flibbed him on them as before. After an exchange of this kind of work, Hyer jerked him from the ropes, and, clinching, wrestled him to the ground and fell upon him.

15. Sullivan shaky on his pins, and Hyer apparently as strong as ever. As Sullivan came up and attempted to hit out, he slipped; Hyer rallied him to the ropes, hitting him right and left in the pursuit, and bending him again over the ropes. During this struggle he caught his arm, and bending it backward in its socket, gave it a wrench that must have caused the most agonizing pain, he then clinched and threw him to the ground and fell upon him as before.

16. When time was called, Sullivan was slow in rising from his second's knee, and it was evident that his fighting star had set, for the day at least. He walked in a limp manner towards the score, but when he put up his left arm the tremor which shook it showed that it was distressed by pain. Hyer did not wait for him, but, advancing beyond the score, let fly both right and left in Sullivan's face, who, though he could not return it, took it without wincing in the least. Hyer then rushed him to the ropes again, and, after a short struggle there, threw him and fell heavily upon him, in which position Sullivan locked his leg over him again, as if he would hold him in his place. When he was taken off, Sullivan was found to be entirely exhausted, and when lifted up reeled half round and staggered backwards towards the ropes. The fight was done. He could not come in again, and McClusky took him from the ring without waiting for time to be called. The fight occupied 17m. 18s.

Seldom had such a lightning fight, with so much punishment compressed into so short a time, been witnessed. Hyer was always cool and collected, waiting to counter with his man, while, on the other hand, Sullivan was overreager, and he fought with reckless determination, continuing to lead as soon as he faced his man, even after the tide had set in strongly and surely against him. The animosity he bore Hyer caused him to lose his temper, and with it, to a great extent, his head. But had he been as cool as his antagonist, and as cunning as ever he was in the ring, his skill and knowledge of ring tactics and tricks would not have availed against the superior powers of Hyer, who completely overmatched him. No pugilist ever fought more gamely than Sullivan, and no one could but admire his grand display of desperate courage. Hyer indubitably proved himself a worthy opponent of any man, and richly merited the title, "Champion of America," then first conferred. On his return to the metropolis he was the recipient of a great ovation, and became the hero of the city. In November, 1853, Hyer challenged William Perry, the "Tipton Slasher," champion of England, to fight for $10,000 a side, give or take $5,000 for expenses to fight in America or Ireland, which deft was not accepted. Tom never fought afterwards. He followed the life of a saloon keeper until after the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, when for a time he was a sutler in the Union army, which business he was obliged to abandon in consequence of failing health. He returned to his native city, where he opened a saloon on West Fourth Street, near Broadway, where, however, he did not long remain, the venture not proving successful. After this his health failed rapidly. He became a mere wreck of his former magnificent self, and on June 26, 1864, he expired, aged forty-five years, and was buried in Greenwood Cemetery. Sullivan afterwards fought John Morrissey, at Boston Corners, Oct. 12, 1853, losing the battle mainly through his own carelessness, as he had all the best of the fighting, this being his last engagement in the P. R. He soon afterwards went to California, where he was arrested by the Vigilance Committee in 1856, and on May 31 of that year he was found dead in a cell. A monument marks his resting place at the Mission Dolores. Joe Winrow died at San Francisco, Nov. 27, 1880, aged 67 years, and Johnny Lyng expired in this city on June 18, 1888, aged 68, having been in very poor circumstances for many years before his death.

JOHN C. HEENAN AND TOM SAYERS' Great International Battle on the Field of Farnborough.

The memory of the great international battle in which the respective champions of America and England, John C. Heenan and Tom Sayers, contended for the mastery will remain green when all other pugilistic encounters have faded into oblivion. Compared with that memorable encounter between the fistic premiers of the two hemispheres, all others are dwarfed into comparative insignificance, for the result of no other engagement in the orthodox circle has ever been awaited with anything approaching the same degree of anxiety, no other ever awakened an approximate degree of widespread interest, nor did any other encounter give rise to so much discussion on both sides of the Atlantic regarding the relative pugilistic abilities of the principals. The principals were the recognized best men in the countries they represented, and their incentive was not found in the amount of money depending on the result, which was but the regular championship stake of $1,000 a side, together with the coveted belt emblematic of the championship, but in the laudable ambition to prove in actual contest the supremacy of the one over the other. The stakes that have been won and lost on prize ring encounters within the last decade have been much heavier, but in nearly every instance it was the consuming desire to secure immediate wealth rather than a praiseworthy attempt to show individual superiority, that actuated the high contracting parties, while in all the engagements in which the illustrious John L. Sullivan has participated he has been so pronounced a favorite that, while the attention of the pugilistic world was naturally attracted by his battles, the fact that the element of uncertainty was lacking detracted from the interest that would otherwise have been invested in the result. The fight between Heenan and Sayers, too, furnished one of the very few instances in which the odds in betting were on the smaller man when they faced each other in the ring, for in struggles in which the weapons provided by nature form the chief factors, size, weight and muscular power must receive due consideration. The fact that Sayers carried the bulk of the money sported on the event under consideration was the natural result of his almost uninterrupted succession of brilliant victories over able boxers, some of them much bigger in every way than himself, for Tom was the lightest pugilist that ever held the championship of heavyweights. The match was the result of a challenge issued by Heenan after John Morrissey had forfeited to him the championship of America by declining to accept the challenge issued by him after their fight for the title in October, 1858. The challenge to Sayers was promulgated on April 25, 1859, and was to fight for the championship of England, the belt (which had then been held by Tom for two years and a half) and the regulation stake of $1,000 a side. The deft was speedily accepted, correspondence between the representatives of the principals was carried on for some time through the columns of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, and on Dec. 16, 1859, the articles of agreement were duly signed, sealed and delivered at the hostelry kept by Owen Swift, one of the former heroes of the ring and a staunch friend of Heenan, at London, Eng. Fred Falkland, of the Dexter House, in this city, then Heenan's headquarters, represented the American champion during the ceremony, while Sayers' backer and life long friend, John Gideon, attended to matters for the English wonder. After taking a benefit at Hoym's Theatre (on the site of which the People's Theatre now stands in the Bowery), Heenan, accompanied by his ever faithful friend and counselor, James Cusick, sailed for Liverpool on the steamer Asia, Jan. 5, 1860. The services of Jack Macdonald, of Dublin, were also secured, and as soon as possible after arriving in England Heenan repaired to training quarters, he giving token of his earnestness by carefully avoiding public houses and newspaper offices, and commencing at once the serious business of preparing for a fistic conflict—a style of doing business which is in striking contrast to that followed by latter day match makers. An unexpectedly unpleasant specimen of British fair play toward strangers to their soil was experienced by Heenan after he got fairly settled down in training, he being so often obliged by the police to change his locale that he may be said to have been "on the go" all the time. However, so assiduously did he train, when the chance was afforded him, that when the day fixed for the combat arrived he was physically as well as could be. A very sanguine temperament, and a firm determination to overcome every obstacle that might be thrown in the way of his success, doubtless served in large measure to prevent the ill effects, mental and physical, which was the evident object of the systematic course of harrassing pursued by the authorities. Although the training quarters of the English champion were located at so public a place as Newmarket, he was never molested—a fact that proved conclusively that the minions of the law were actuated by unworthy motives in acting as they did toward the American. So deep was the general interest taken in the match by the people of the United States that, in the absence of telegraphing facilities (the Atlantic cable not being available), several New York papers sent special correspondents, among them THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, Wilkes' Spirit of the Times, Harper's Weekly and Frank Leslie's Illustrated. THE CLIPPER had half a dozen presses working steadily day and night, and then with difficulty supplied the demand, while B-U's Life in London, the then English authority in ring matters, whose editor, Frank Dowling, was referee, sold here like hot cakes for fifty cents per copy. In England the excitement created by the match was without precedent, and the scenes in and about the sporting houses in the British metropolis the night preceding April 17, 1880, were beyond description. The regular fare to the fighting ground was $15, and the thirty-six cars that conveyed the excursionists to the spot were crowded. More came from other directions, and it was estimated that fully ten thousand persons, among whom were many noblemen and untitled persons of distinction (including, it was stated, the Prime Minister, Lord Palmeston, in disguise), elbowed one another around the twenty-four foot ring, which was pitched at Farnborough, in Hampshire. There it was that Heenan and Sayers first laid eyes on each other, and it goes without saying that each scrutinized the other most earnestly. They greeted each other pleasantly, and Sayers' offer to bet on the result was declined by Heenan, with the remark that he had bet all his money. The toss for choice of corners was won by the American, who was seconded by Jack Macdonald and Jim Cusick, Fred Falkland acting as umpire, while Sayers had for esquires Harry Brunton and Jimmy Welsh, his backer, Jonny Gideon, standing as umpire. When the process of disrobing had been completed, it was seen that each was a magnificent specimen of vigorous, muscular manhood, quite worthy to contend for the palm in so important an encounter. Both were in fine condition, but the grand appearance of the towering form of Heenan especially impressed the spectators, who were surprised at the perfect symmetry of his form and the splendid development of his chest, arms and shoulders. Heenan's colors consisted of a white silk handkerchief, with red, white and blue border, with an American eagle in the centre, above its head appearing the memorable words: "May the Best Man Win." Sayers' kerchief was cream colored, bearing the royal standard of Great Britain and Ireland, in colors, in the centre, with a lion rampant shield at each corner, and was bordered in crimson.

THE FIGHT.

Round I.—The men went up with great quickness at the call of time, and with a smile upon their faces, mixed, however, with a great degree of seriousness, commenced squaring away. Heenan choosing his position, under the direction of Macdonald, close in his own corner, with the view of drawing Sayers upon him and hitting as he advanced, instead of following him, as had been the fatal policy of most of Sayers' previous opponents. The position of Sayers was very elegant, he touching the earth lightly with his feet, and settling himself backward and forward while measuring his man with the ease and grace of a dancing master. As they sparred the audience almost held their breath. Two or three times Sayers feinted lightly, but Heenan showed his readiness, and laughed at checking the good intention. Heenan himself tried in the same way, and Sayers showed his wariness in like manner; at length, however, pursuing his brow and gathering his muscles quickly, he let fly and caught the Boy lightly on the mouth, slightly drawing blood. Immense applause, and cries of "First blood for Sayers" went up at this. They sparred carefully again, and Heenan at length let fly, but did not get home; then, following the blow, he rushed in, clenched, and threw Sayers easily. (Cheers from Heenan's friends.)

2. Sayers again went over to Heenan's corner, and, after some cautious feinting, Heenan let fly with his left, but Sayers stopped handsomely, and fell short with his return. Heenan then pressed upon him, let fly with his left, and caught him on the chin. Sayers gave way, and Heenan, following, planted two more straight hits in quick succession on the mouth, this time drawing claret from the champion. Sayers, in endeavoring to counter, rushed in and clenched, and was thrown. (More cheers for Heenan.)

3. This round was begun, like both the previous ones, in Heenan's corner. Several passes were made without effect, but Heenan, watching his opportunity, let fly with his left, and hit Sayers clean down. (Great cheers.)

First knock down for Heenan.

4. Sayers came up readily and with good will, notwithstanding the disaster which befell him at the close of the last round. The same stereotyped smile was on the face of both; but while it was sweetest on the mug of Sayers, Heenan's left fist split the expression in the middle, and away went Sayers clean from his feet and stretched upon the ground.

5. Heenan passed over to Sayers' side of the ring, and opened the fighting. Sayers, however, gave way, and at length fled from the approach of mischief by a sideway sort of run. But Heenan seemed to have been instructed in this artifice, and, gathering up his arms, smiled, and took a waiting position. Sayers came up again, and they began to spar afresh. Presently Heenan found his chance, and, letting go his left, caught Sayers smack upon the forehead. Bewildered somewhat by the blow, Sayers gave way, and Heenan, pressing on, repeated the visitation twice more, Sayers, after a light return upon the cheek, going down to avoid.

6. "Six to four on the Benecia Boy." Sayers came up, and walked, as at first, to Heenan's corner, and there commenced the battle, getting in a tremendous hit under the right eye, which made a clean crosswise cut of half an inch, let out a gush of blood, and at once puffed up Heenan's cheek. Stung by this blow, Heenan rushed upon him, and, with another clean hit knocked Sayers down.

7. When Heenan came up to the scratch his right eye was fearfully swollen, and projected upward like a cushion. This was an immediate signal for the jeers and taunts of the friends of Sayers, and the champion himself took part in the enjoyment by placing himself in front of Heenan with folded arms, and smiling plyingly on him. Heenan paid no heed to this, but bore McDonald's grooming quietly, and when the crimson tide from his puffed cheek was partly stopped he went to his adversary again. The cheers were still greeting the champion's splendid cut, when Heenan went up and measured him, and sent his left, and caught Sayers bang upon the mouth. Sayers returned lightly on the damaged eye again, and Heenan gave him another rifle shot upon the head. A few exchanges then took place, and the men separated of their own accord, Heenan submitting to the sponge again, while Sayers smiled at Heenan with folded arms, as the process was going on. Heenan resumed again by leading with the left, but the blow fell short. Tom now got within distance, and sent home a hot 'un just above the mark that sounded like the report of a gun. After being again attended to by their seconds the men again approached each other, Sayers offering the left, but being terribly countered on the mouth with the Boy's left, which sent him on another kissing excursion to mother earth.

8. As soon as Heenan came up he put in his left on the champion's right cheek, Sayers, however, fought towards him, and, getting an opportunity, sent a light hit in the chin, and then dodged under Heenan's arm to avoid a most wicked return. As Sayers rose, however, and Heenan got him square in front of him again, he landed a heavy hit upon the champion's nose, which nearly knocked him down. Heenan then gave way again, and Sayers, stung by the last visitation, came pressing back, and when he thought himself at proper distance, let fly again, but Heenan caught it handsomely upon his right arm, and threw it off with a smile, as if to say such nonsense would not do. The champion made it do, however, for gathering himself again, he let loose with his left a well directed blow, and caught Heenan again upon the cushion under the right, letting out another little rill of blood. Heenan drew close upon Sayers, and, getting his opportunity, away went the left bower, again flattening the Brighton hero's nose, and sending him back several feet. "What do you think of the Yankee boy now?" said Macdonald proudly at this hit, and spreading his hands behind him as if about to catch a cricket ball. Then bang came a straight shot from Sayers, plump on the cushioned eye. Heenan now began to exhibit signs of weakness, and cries of "Two to one on Sayers" were heard again, mixed with expressions of derision about the Yankee giving way in his legs. Sayers pressed forward and planted another on Heenan's mouth. Still going at him, he delivered a sounding body hit full in the centre of the ribs, and in return napped a terrific paixham from the left bower upon the mouth. The men now separated, but the round did not close. Heenan's right eye was now almost closed, but, in retaliation for the coarse derision it drew forth from Sayers' friends, he sent in a spanking hit upon the champion's cheek, and repeated with another on the nose. Sayers tried to rally, but Heenan's luck was in, and perceiving that the right forearm of the champion was fearfully swollen, he went at him fiercely, and, by a thundering stroke from the left piston, leveled him to the earth. This was a round of most terrific fighting, highly creditable to the courage of both men, and setting both on the top round of estimation with all the capable critics round the ring as first class, skillful and thorough fighters. It lasted nearly fifteen minutes.

9. Sayers came up showing distress, and, as Heenan went fiercely after him, he hurriedly gave ground, and as the Boy pressed on, commenced dancing off sideways, and finally turned the movement into a run. Heenan burst out laughing at this shine, and, standing in an easy nonchalant manner, wheeled handily on his heel so as to continue to face him without following after. Advancing on him again, he planted a severe blow on the chin, and followed it up by two repeaters, the last of which turned Sayers quite around, whereupon, while he was pitching forward in that position, Heenan gave chase, and hit him down by a blow upon the back. (Cheers for Heenan.)

10. Sayers came up rather uncertain on his legs, with his wounded right arm clinging paralyzed against his breast. No one who knew his gallant history could help sympathizing with him in his sore distress, and wishing he was out of his present peril. But the gladiator who opposed him, like his screaming backers, had no such thoughts as these, but rather pressed on him the more, and, going at him right and left, ended the round by again knocking him clean down.

11. Heenan went at Sayers briskly again, in order to keep him buried while in his crippled state. Being a little incautious in his advance, however, Sayers propped him as he came in, and, as Heenan was meditating a return, got in another, but not very effective, hit, and fell backward through the ropes.

12. Sayers still came up feebly, and Heenan went after him as before, and, while Sayers was dancing before him, evidently bewildered and confused, he leveled him again in the coolest manner with a straight left hander, and walked smilingly back to his corner.

13. Heenan again forced the fighting, and Sayers, now very weak, fled from his dangerous pursuer. As soon as he ventured to turn and face, Heenan planted another hit upon his mouth, and knocked him clean off his legs again. (Cheers for Heenan. Two to one on the Benicia Boy.)

14. The superiority of Heenan was now completely manifest, and expressions of admiration at his fine style of fighting were heard all round the ring. In this round Heenan went at Sayers in the business style of the two last, and delivered in succession two telling hits on the neck and mouth, Sayers countering neatly on the latter by a blow on the right cheek. Heenan then caught him on the head, at which Sayers rushed in, clenched, and, after a momentary struggle, both fell together on Sayers' side of the ring, Sayers having rather the best of the fall. Cheers went up from his corner at this ripple in his favor.

15. Heenan was again up first at the scratch, as he had been every time for the last eight or ten rounds, while Sayers, who exhibited much distress, was rising from his second's knee reluctantly and slow. This time Heenan went straight up to him and hit him down with his right as if Sayers had been made of wood.

16. Sayers came up slow, backing or dancing away apprehensively, and ending by being knocked down, Heenan walking from him with a smile to his corner.

17. Like the last in all respects, and ending in a clear knock down, Heenan, good naturedly accosting his principal backer, Jim Hughes, said: "That's for you, Jim!"

18. Sayers came up slowly, Heenan went at him, and, cornering him despite his quick retreat, hit him down at the ropes. (100 to anything on Heenan.)

19. Sayers looked much distressed, and, as Heenan advanced confidently upon him with his terrible left mawley, threatening new punishment, he sidled off; but Heenan, following, checked his retiring course, though he did not get in his usual blow. Sayers, on the contrary, caught him lightly on the right cheek and mouth, upon which Heenan rushed in, clenched and threw Sayers, falling very heavily upon him. "Five to one on Heenan."

20. Sayers again commenced the running game, Heenan stepping lightly around so as to keep him before him, and delivering him a hit on the shoulder as he went. Sayers turned and planted a light blow on the chest, which Heenan returned with interest upon the mouth. He then rushed in, clenched and threw Sayers upon the ropes, where he slipped down, scraping his back as he went.

21. Heenan went to the scratch and waited for Sayers, and when he came up hit him down clean with a splendid blow and walked away.

22. Sayers, who now, notwithstanding his severe punishment, seemed to be freshening a little, managed to prop Heenan once or twice as he incautiously advanced upon him; but Heenan, stubborn to his purpose, still bored in, and succeeded in again finishing him with a knockdown blow.

23. Sayers still kept up the shifting game, but Heenan pursued and hit him in the back, without, however, knocking him down. Sayers, after pitching forward with the blow, recovered himself, and let go with his left, getting lightly in upon the body. Heenan returned and fell short. A few light exchanges followed, and they then separated for the sponge. The men then came up again, when Sayers, gathering himself, handsomely caught Heenan as he again advanced with a fine telling hit upon the mouth. Heenan then rushed in, clenched and struggled for the throw, and they went to earth together, with Sayers slightly on top. (Great cheers for Sayers.)

24. Sayers came up slow again, and after a few feints and passes Heenan again knocked him down.

25. Sayers came up this time evidently freshening, and with a smile upon his face, and it was observed that the vast swelling which had so disfigured his right fore arm had nearly gone down, though it did not promise to be of much more use to him than Heenan's right eye, now entirely closed. Amid cries of "two to one on Heenan," the Boy pressed forward, and, after taking two light but well directed admonishers that the man before him was not yet beaten, he succeeded in straightening the left duke out again, and landed the champion once more upon the grass.

26. Sayers came up late, Heenan waiting for him quietly, and was the first to lead off at the mouth, and barely getting in, danced backwards and ran away from the return. Heenan followed and delivered a good hit on the chin, and as Sayers, who was on his own side of the ring, sought to fly, Heenan, who was pursuing, reached out his hand to catch, and in doing so made a grab, which took Sayers' whole face in his open paw, and must have hurt the now sensitive mouth considerably, for the blood started from his mouth afresh. He then brought Sayers to a stand; but it was not much to his profit that he did so, for the champion got one in upon his breast. The blow was light, however, and he retreated from the return, but succeeded in getting in another on the same place. Heenan rushed in, but his blow passed over the champion's head as the latter went down.

27. Heenan led off again, and landed a heavy hit on the champion's mouth, and, as he followed up and let fly another, Sayers got to the earth to avoid the punishment.

28. Two to one freely offered on the Benicia Boy, but no takers. Sayers did not look so feeble as some few rounds before, but he was evidently much distressed; and, unless some lucky accident could retrieve his fortune, defeat stared him surely in the face. Heenan led off again, planting his favorite hit upon the mouth, while Sayers countered on the left cheek. Heenan went at him like a tiger, hit him again on the mouth, and, as he ran to escape, delivered another chopping lick upon his stooping back. Again they received the cleansing offices of the sponge, and that being over, Heenan stepped forward once more, but Sayers retired, and partly ran. Heenan following quickly, discharged a hit on the back of his neck, and as Sayers turned to fight he hit against the ropes, and as he fell, grabbed for him and then caught him a terrific upper cut, whereupon the champion sank to the earth.

29. Sayers came up very weak in the knees, and almost staggering, and Heenan rushed over to his side of the ring after him, and began the fighting briskly. Sayers tried to get away, but Heenan followed him sharply and caught him with one of his old left handers, which leveled him at the ropes.

30. Sayers came up spiritedly this time, and gathering himself handsomely, let fly with his left, and caught Heenan on the mouth. The Boy pressed forward for retaliation, but caught it with great severity again, and once more the cheers went up for Sayers. Heenan rushed forward, but his blow passed over the shoulder, and Sayers catching again heavily on the mouth, went down amid great cheering from his friends. This was a very severe round for Heenan, who bled freely; but there was not a man on the ground who did not admire the sound game which he displayed in following up the sharpest and most damaging cuts.

31. Sayers this time walked over into Heenan's corner, and opened the campaign himself. As quick as thought he planted a sharp cut on Heenan's mouth, and followed it by a light touch on the left cheek, and then got down.

32. Heenan led off, but Sayers got away, and subsequently a few passes were exchanged with no effect, and, as the blood was flowing from Heenan's serious cuts all the while, he paused in his hostilities to be temporarily sponged off. When they came together again Sayers was the first up with a light tap. Light exchanges followed, another separation took place, and the round ended by Heenan measuring his adversary handsomely, and hitting him down by a tremendous blow on the nose.

33. While the two men commenced to square away, they thought to make a diversion in favor of the champion by an outcry of "Police! Police!" in the hope that Heenan, as a stranger, might be struck with alarm, and either be induced in natural panic to jump over the ropes, and thus forfeit the fight, or to turn his head so that the watchful champion might get at his left eye. But the artifice did not take. Heenan had been forewarned of the intended dodge, and he had seen, moreover, that several policemen had been quietly looking at the battle ever since the seventh round. He, therefore, only fought on the fiercer, and Sayers, being on the lookout for chances at the same moment, they had a passage of real ding-dong, give and take fighting in the ancient style. The blood flowed freely from them both, and two or three times they stepped aside to sponge, but neither paid any more attention to the swaying crowd, and the pretended effort to keep back the police, than if no effort of the sort had been made. Heenan got sharply on the nose of Sayers, and the latter in return caught Heenan heavily on the mouth, drawing a further quantity of blood. Sayers seemed to be encouraged and to freshen up at this, and went after Heenan; but the Boy caught him and floored him with another square knock down blow. (100 to 20 on Heenan.)

34. Sayers now came up very weak, and his partisans, seeing his chance was almost hopeless, kept up the clamor about the police, but Heenan paid no heed to the idle trick, but went up to the fading Sayers and hit at him with effect, and then closed upon him for a fall. As they struggled for the fall, and while they fell, it so happened that Sayers' right hand became free to play upon Heenan's left eye, and play upon it he did so vigorously that the orb threatened to close under the unexpected visitation. Sayers was thrown and Heenan fell on him; but when the latter reached his corner, and the swelling eye was seen, the hopes of his friends began to be disturbed.

35. Sayers rushed in to improve the opportunity thus given to him, and with his apparently increased chances the clamor about the police subsided, and during the sharp exchanges that ensued that particular alarm was done, and the round ended by Heenan seizing Sayers in his arms and throwing him out from him clean to the earth as if he were a frog.

36. Heenan, however, in addition to this strength, was not so much damaged on the left eye as the backers of Sayers supposed; he had plenty of daylight in it to find his adversary, and he went after him like a tiger. Right and left he gave it him in the most commanding style—first on the mouth, then on the right cheek, and then hit him against the ropes. After a slight separation, and a process of sponging off, he went at him again, but caught it on the mouth, and lost considerable blood in consequence. Again he pressed upon him, but Sayers was too quick, and went down to avoid.

37. The cries of police now became perfectly deafening from Sayers' side, but Heenan still looked neither right nor left, but only at his man. He hit him once on the back as he was running to his corner, and as Sayers struck back and missed, he seized him around his neck, and held him for a minute in the air. Sayers, however, seized Heenan by the cheek and pulled at its sore and flabby folds most painfully. This forced Heenan to lose his hold, and Sayers slipped down.

38. It was now plain, from the noise around Sayers' corner, that it was the determination of his party to bring the fight to such a close as would save Sayers the belt; but still Heenan kept to his work, and Macdonald kept steering him with judicious steadiness. He was determined to fight and do nothing else, so long as he could get Sayers to fight with him, and, though the ring was now on the point of being broken in, he went up to his man and fought as manfully and desperately as at first. He hit Sayers as he pleased, and, finally seizing him by the neck, he bent his head under his arm and held him there and against the ropes completely at his mercy. Left to himself, Sayers must have sunk helplessly to the earth, incapable to respond again to time, whereupon, finding a desperate crisis had arrived, the adherents of the champion actually took hold of Heenan's arms, and while they kicked at and struck at him, dragged the beaten champ on from his hold.

39. The confusion was now so great that no appeals could possibly be heard, and the ring being broken in by the friends of Sayers, at the same moment the referee, Frank Dowling, very improperly got up and retired. Heenan, however, apprehending some new artifice to prevent him from obtaining the belt he had so fairly won, remained in the ring, and when time was called went after Sayers again through the centre of the crowd that now swarmed within the inner ropes of the arena. Sayers was pushed up towards him, but he easily hit him down or pursued him to the corner among his seconds, as a man would drive a boy.

40. Heenan again found his way through the crowd of outside parties who now occupied the arena, and, crossing the scratch amid cries of "Take the men out of the ring!" "The fight is over!" etc., waited till Sayers was brought up. He then again hit him down, and went back to his corner, refusing to leave the ring.

41. This was a counterpart of the last, with the exception that, after exchanging a pass, Sayers rushed in and clenched Heenan, and while struggling to throw him passed his hand, not only below the belt, in violation of the rules, but grasped him by the back part of the thigh, and sought to lift him from his feet; Heenan, however, broke away and finished the round by knocking Sayers down. Had there been a referee present, this must have been decided "foul," and the battle given against Sayers.

42. Finding that, though Sayers could not, or would not, rise from his seat in his corner, and his seconds refused to award him the victory that belonged to him by throwing up the sponge, Heenan advanced upon him in the midst of his seconds and struck him where he sat, being struck in return by Jimmy Welsh. He knocked down and kicked him, and then went for Brunton, who got away. Being struck by another of Sayers' friends, he turned upon the other party, and, in his just indignation at the outrageous manner in which the object of his ambition had been dishonorably wrestled from him, he opened a free fight against them all. His friends, however, interfered, and carried him back to his corner, from whence, after declaring himself to be the winner of the fight and the true owner of the belt and title of Champion of England, he left the ring. The battle lasted 2h. 20m.

After Sayers had left the ring, leaning on the shoulders of his seconds, Heenan followed, leaping over the ropes and running some distance in a way that betokened that he was not only strong on his legs, but that he had still sight enough to have enabled him to finish Sayers had he been granted fair play. The consummate skill and generalship displayed by the Englishman so long as nature enabled him to present a bold front was worthy of all praise, but he was no match for such a man as the American champion. Heenan did everything in his power to bring about a renewal of the fight, as under the rules should have been ordered by the referee immediately, but the Sayers party were opposed to it, and as they had on their side that official, whose duty it was to have remained at the ring side until he could have rendered a fair and honorable decision, either giving the verdict in favor of the principal who had the best of the fighting at the time the ring was broken in or ordering another time and place of meeting within the week, they ultimately effected their object, and the stake money was returned, with the understanding that Sayers should retire permanently from the ring. Subsequently the farce of publicly presenting to each principal a fac simile of the original belt was gone through with at the Alhambra Palace, London. Sayers received and retained his, but as that handed to the American had never been paid for, it was returned to the manufacturer, and Heenan never again obtained possession of it. Upon the return of the latter to New York the public gave emphatic expression to their sympathy and admiration for him by gathering at old Jones' Wood to the estimated number of fifty thousand to welcome him home. Upon that occasion the beneficiary was presented with a certified check for $10,000, contributed by admiring friends. A fund of $15,000 was raised for Sayers, which was invested by trustees. Tom to receive the interest of the amount during his life, providing he did not again enter the ring as a principal, and in the event of his dying the interest was to go to his children until they were of age, and then the principal was to be divided between them. Heenan returned to England in the Spring of 1862, and afterwards he and Sayers traveled for some time with Howes & Cushing's Circus, sparring together daily, the engagement being for a year. He was induced to re-enter the ring the following year, making a match with Tom King, who had beaten Jim Mace, the stakes being $10,000, the largest sum ever fought for outside the United States at that time. The fight gave rise to intense excitement, and, although the tariff was very high, the train of thirty coaches that conveyed the spectators to the ring side, at Wadhurst, in Kent, Dec. 10, 1863, was jammed with humanity. Heenan's seconds were Jack Macdonald and Tom Sayers (the latter considerably under the influence of liquor, and hardly of any use to his principal), while King was escorted by Bos Tyler and Jerry Noon. This was a tremendous battle, but its result was very unsatisfactory, and the suspicious circumstances connected with it have never been explained. Up to the seventeenth round Heenan had away the best of the milling, and in that round he knocked King completely out of time, the ring was filled with the partisans of the Englishman, and several minutes elapsed before King was brought to consciousness and delivered at the scratch. But during the time that King lay unconscious in his corner no one claimed the fight for Heenan, as his seconds or umpire should have done, and he went to the scratch to renew a fight that under the rules he would already have won had his seconds done their duty. Now Heenan appeared bewildered and stupefied, became receiver general, and soon was altogether at the mercy of the Englishman, who had entirely recovered and punished the American severely. Finally at the close of the twenty-fourth round, after they had been fighting thirty-five minutes, Macdonald threw up the sponge in token of defeat. Afterwards Heenan had a severe fit of vomiting. It was the general belief that Macdonald had acted treacherously toward his principal, a belief that many still entertain. Macdonald died in England on April 9, 1883, and in commenting on his career the late Henry G. Sampson, alias "Pendragon," editor and proprietor of The London Referee, who was a sporting reporter in London at the time of the fight, penned the following significant paragraph:

"It would have been better for the sake of sport, to say nothing about honor or honesty, if Heenan had been killed outright, instead of being left to linger out a wretched, miserable existence, a prey to the effects of narcotic poison. Those who were in active sporting existence at the time, and in any way behind the scenes, do not require to be told that Heenan had for weeks after the fight to be carefully watched for fear he might commit suicide, which, to my certain knowledge, he would have done in the first distress of defeat had he not been prevented by mixed force and entreaty. I wonder what an analyst would have said if called upon to examine what it was Heenan vomited so freely after the fight was over. How those who knew did laugh, to be sure, at the learned dissertations which appeared in The Lancet and similar papers so as to account for the remarkably sudden collapse of Heenan after he had at the beginning thrown King about just as though he had been a shuttlecock or a baby. Vitality versus Muscularity was the text selected, and the most learned screeds therefrom resulted, the only defect in them being that, as the basis was altogether erroneous, the entire edifice was erroneous also. It is no end of a pity that when the late J. Macdonald was dying, and knew he was dying, the question was not put to him as delicately as possible, among other questions, how it was he did not demand the fight for Heenan from a referee who has often enough since admitted that he would have had no option but to have conceded the demand, during the four or five minutes when King was being brought round after lying insensible—a period so long that many people got up and walked away, thinking that no power on earth could prolong the contest further. Those who heard them will never forget the shrieks of joy raised by the Eastenders, who had been as silent as death before, when they saw King step forth from his corner, while Heenan, who had been getting ready to dress and go away, was, dazed and bewildered, called on to renew the fight he had, according to all practice and precedent, won already."

Heenan afterwards took up the business of bookmaking, at which he prospered fairly well, but, tiring of life abroad, he returned to this country in December, 1865. In the Fall of 1868 he challenged Mike McCool to fight for the championship and $10,000 a side, but the challenge was not accepted, and Heenan's last appearance in public in this city was when he sparred with Jim Mace at the Old Bowery Theatre, Feb. 11, 1870, and his last appearance in the ring when he acted as umpire for Mace in the latter's fight with Tom Allen at New Orleans, La., May 10, 1870. He afterwards became a partner of Mike Murray and James J. Kelso in a sporting house on Eighth Street, this city, in which business he accumulated a handsome fortune. He never recovered from the effects of the "dosing" he was believed to have received in England, and gradually went into decline, his health becoming so poor that in October, 1873, he left with Jim Cusick for Lower California, in the hope of receiving relief. He failed to reach his destination, however, death overtaking him in a railroad car at Green River Station, Wyo., Oct. 25. His remains were brought to this city, and were buried at Albany. He was born May 2, 1834, at West Troy, and was thirty-nine years old at the time of his death. It was a remarkable coincidence that Sayers died at the same age, on Dec. 8, 1865. James Cusick, who was for many years the trusted officer at Delmonico's principal establishment in this city, died in the Spring of 1890, aged 66 years.

MORRISSEY AND HEENAN.

Their Desperate Contest for the Championship of America.

In the annals of the prize ring in America no name is better known than that of John Morrissey, the only member of the fistic brotherhood who rose to the distinction of representing his district in the great Empire State, or any other State, in the Halls of Congress, in which respect he stood on a footing with the celebrated John Gully, the English pugilist, whose ambition and personal qualities enabled him to rise to the honorable position of member of Parliament for Pontefract. Nor will the memory of the fight for the championship of America between Morrissey and John C. Heenan, which took place on Canadian soil as far back as 1858, ever fade away. The interest which it awakened in all portions of the country was second only to that created by the Hyer and Sullivan mill, while its desperate character, the tremendous hard hitting for which it was remarkable, and the dogged determination and splendid courage displayed by both principals, were never surpassed in any pugilistic encounter and equaled in few. Strangely enough Heenan and Morrissey not only both hailed from Troy, N. Y., but their fathers were acquainted in the land of the shamrock, where John Morrissey was born, while Heenan was a native of Troy, there being a difference of about three years in their ages, with the latter the younger. During their boyhood days there had been great rivalry between them, which did not grow less as they grew older, and as both had a penchant for fistic sport, and each became quite clever in the use of their fists before attaining their majority, it was no wonder that they should in the course of time experience a mutual desire to prove by actual physical combat the superiority of one over the other. It was not till, however, after their return from California (where both had gone during the prevalence of the gold fever, in the hope of bettering their fortune, without startling success) that overtures for a match between them were made. In the meantime Morrissey had, during his sojourn in California, made his debut in the ring, his adversary being George Thompson, who had trained Tom Hyer for the fight with Yankee Sullivan, and the fight taking place in August, 1852. Morrissey proved the victor, and his success naturally added to his stock of conceit, while the bulldog courage he had shown in the affair gave him a place in the fistic world. He had resided in the metropolis some time previously to visiting the Golden Gate, and his friends here disputed the right of Yankee Sullivan to lead the Celtic element here, especially as Morrissey was the younger and bigger man. The upshot of numerous disputes and offhand scraps over the matter was the making of a match between Morrissey and Sullivan, for $1,000 a side, the championship not being included in the issue. The fight took place at Boston Four Corners, and it resulted in the defeat of Sullivan, who proved himself the cleverer fighter by far, but he was led into a trap by those who knew how quick tempered he was, and at a time when it looked dollars to pennies on his winning in a canter, he became involved in a fight with his adversary's seconds, during which "time" was repeatedly called, without "Sully" responding (because he did not hear the call, being so busily engaged in the outside row), and the referee, Charley Allaire, gave the decision in favor of Morrissey. It was a very fortunate thing for the latter, who could not have won on his merits, resolute fighter though he was. Sullivan was altogether too clever, cunning, shifty and too rapid a fighter for him. Of the seconds of the men, Billy Wilson and Tom O'Donnell are dead, while Andy Sheehan and "Awful" Gardner are alive. There is an old saying, "Nothing succeeds like success," and the fact that Morrissey had achieved a victory over so great a pugilist as Yankee Sullivan, no matter what might have contributed to that victory, added greatly to his reputation and put him fairly in the championship class. Heenan came to New York from California in 1857, having been induced to come East by Jim Cusick, who was a splendid judge of fighting material, and had become impressed with the young Trojan's abilities and magnificent physique after becoming acquainted with him while Heenan was working in the railroad shops at Benecia, Cal., where his success in different offhand turnups had gained for him the sobriquet of "the Benecia Boy," a title that always clung to him. Cusick was influenced in his action by a desire to match him against Morrissey for the championship, and soon after the arrival of the pair in the metropolis fistic talk became hot. Heenan was somewhat hot headed and equally ambitious, and after the exchange of cards through the newspapers he, on July 3, 1858, publicly challenged Morrissey. The deft was accepted without unnecessary delay, and on July 19 a match to fight for the championship and $2,500 a side was made in THE CLIPPER office. The place of fighting was Long Point, Can., and the date Oct. 20, 1858. The men entered upon a course of training soon afterwards, the noted English pugilist, Aaron Jones, one of Tom Sayers' opponents, being sent for expressly to train Heenan, aided by Cusick, while Morrissey trained near Troy, having Long John Lawrence as chief attendant, with Jack Hamilton to help put on the finishing touches. The ring was erected near the lighthouse on the island, and Jim Hughes, a noted character of the time, claimed the stakes for Heenan, on the ground that the ring had been pitched on sand, instead of on turf, as demanded by the rules. His principal waived this objection, however, although the work of preparation had developed a very unfavorable diathesis, which had prevented Heenan taking exercise for some days previously, in consequence of which his physical condition was much inferior to that of Morrissey. The trouble was in the right leg, he could not move about without experiencing great pain; so it can be readily understood that he went into the fight under great disadvantages. He was seconded by Aaron Jones and Johnny Mackey, with Frank McCabe as umpire, while Morrissey was waited upon by Bill Hastings and Australian Kelly, with Billy Mulligan for umpire. There were two referees, Louis Beiral and Johnny Austin. Morrissey's weight was about 173lb., while Heenan weighed 190lb.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Morrissey took the initiative, and sent out his left with tremendous force, but the blow did not reach; he tried with his right, and was cleverly stopped. Heenan, letting fly his right, caught Morrissey upon the left eye. Loud cheers from Heenan's side, with cries of "First blood." Heenan discharged three more with his left, pressing Morrissey toward the ropes. Morrissey seemed surprised at this unexpected cannonade, and some desperate in-fighting followed, in which Heenan seemed to be the master. Morrissey broke away, and Heenan struck a stake instead of his man, and seriously damaged two of his knuckles. Heenan then rushed in, and severe hits were exchanged, mostly in favor of Heenan. Morrissey seemed on the point of throwing him, when Heenan broke the hold, changed the position in his own favor, threw Morrissey heavily, falling upon him. Immense applause went up at this result from the party of the Benecia Boy. The round lasted six minutes. Morrissey had much the worst of it.

2. The Benecia Boy cut loose again, and delivered two terrific hits with his left on Morrissey's nose, the latter staggering him. Morrissey kept his hands well up, however, and stopped a third attempt of like character. Heenan then sent in a stunning blow on Morrissey's right eye. Wild fighting followed, in which Morrissey delivered some effective body hits. After an exchange of a few not very effective hits at long reach, Heenan rushed in and clinched, and then ensued a terrific struggle for the fall. Heenan's hand pressed the face of Morrissey backward, but, correcting the accident by cries of "Foul," he passed it downward, and, taking a fresh hold, he threw him heavily, and fell upon him. The cries of "Foul" were set up again by the friends of Morrissey, but the claim was not allowed.

3. Morrissey led off with force, but hit short, and caught a terrible right hander on the cheek in return, then another stinging visitation in the same neighborhood, which puffed up his cheek and covered him with blood. Morrissey rushed at his man, but Heenan delivered two or three more, getting home with his left effectively on the nose. Morrissey still pressed to meet his punishment, countered once or twice with much effect, and a good hit having turned Heenan's side toward him, he let fly with his right, and caught him a banging hit on the left side. Heenan turned, let fly with his left without effect, whereupon Morrissey rushed in and clinched, and there followed a tremendous effort for the fall. Morrissey proved this time too powerful for his fast fighting antagonist, threw him handsomely, and fell heavily upon him. Loud cheers for Morrissey.

4. Those body hits in the third round convinced Heenan's friends that he had been fighting too fast. Morrissey detected this condition like a watchful general, and advanced within range of the Benicia Boy, and caught a stinging blow upon the nose, which sent him back three or four steps; Heenan pressed after his advantage with similar incaution, and caught a fearful visitation on the same feature, which drew blood in profusion. Applause followed this trenchant hit, and the re-encouraged friends of Morrissey again shouted out the original odds. Heenan now retired from Morrissey's fierce advance, whereupon Morrissey rushed in and challenged for the throw. They fell, Morrissey on top.

5. Morrissey, advancing fiercely upon Heenan, delivered a stunning blow upon the head, which brought him to a standstill. Recovering with surprising quickness, Heenan let fly right and left, getting well in twice on Morrissey's right cheek; for this he received heavily in return, on the body and in the face. Heenan got his left arm round Morrissey's neck, with a good chance of getting it in chancery. But Morrissey broke away, and open fighting again commenced. Several ineffective hits were exchanged, Morrissey retreating, but as he neared the ropes Heenan delivered a tremendous shot upon the jaw, which knocked him clean from his feet. This was the first knockdown blow, and elicited loud cheers.

6. The men maneuvered for an opening; Morrissey, quickest on his feet, reached Heenan's nose, receiving left and right in return. More sparring, when Morrissey got in his left heavily on Heenan's neck. Heenan's blows seemed to lack precision, the consequence of failing strength evidently telling on him badly. Morrissey closed the round by rushing in and delivering a severe upper cut, when they clinched, and Heenan was thrown, Morrissey falling upon him heavily.

7. The contrast in the condition of the two contestants became more remarkable. Morrissey took the lead, but Heenan managed to get in a couple of slashing facers, as if determined to relieve Morrissey's head of any extravasated blood. The body blows sent by Morrissey told with powerful effect, though Heenan took them without flinching. In the close Morrissey's hand was momentarily passed across Heenan's face. Heenan made a desperate effort to obtain the fall, but was thrown heavily; Morrissey, however, kept him company.

8. Heenan's stock on the decline; that of Morrissey on the rise, and he seemed determined to plump Heenan at his own corner. As Heenan gave way, however, he kept exhibiting a fighter's instinct, and, in return for the visitation he received about the body, he got in two pretty good hits on Morrissey's right cheek. Morrissey then made a rush at him, delivered some five or six telling hits, and was on the point of crowding him on the ropes, when Heenan went down from exhaustion.

9. Apart from Heenan's lack of condition, he now began to acknowledge the receipt of Morrissey's handiwork on the body. Heenan struck out wildly several times, turning himself once or twice half round by the force of his blow. Morrissey, however, was so weak that he could not advance briskly enough to take advantage of the opportunity thus given to him. Presently, however, they got settled in position, and a fair exchange, Morrissey getting in twice on the body, and Heenan countering ineffectively on the cheek. Morrissey then pressed Heenan to his corner, where the Benicia Boy was thrown.

10. After sparring around for distance measure, Heenan resumed a slight rally, but was stopped, and received on the cheek; in return for this, however, he countered on the forehead with a very telling hit; some rough exchanges followed, in which Morrissey had much the best of it; he then ran in, clinched his man, threw him, and fell on him. Wild shouts went up from the Morrissey crowd, and offers were made of 100 to 10 that their favorite would be the victor.

11. The fight was now reduced to a mere question of endurance. What ability to hit remained was with Morrissey. Heenan reeled and staggered, as both were led off the scratch. All that Morrissey need do was to lead off and hit him, without danger of rejoinder. Heenan endeavored to counter, but he struck wildly in the air, and overreaching himself in this way, in endeavoring to return a sharp blow, which Morrissey had delivered on the neck, he fell from exhaustion, and was carried insensible to his corner. The time of the fight was twenty-one minutes.

Morrissey was never afterwards a candidate for pugilistic honors, and his connection with the ring in any capacity ceased after the international battle between Heenan and Sayers, in which he took a lively interest on behalf of the Britisher—a fact which engendered much ill feeling against him in this country. He entered largely into the gaming business, conducting popular establishments in this city and Saratoga, in which latter resort he built a race course and the Saratoga Club House, which became the most noted gaming palace in the country, and which he carried on during life. He had strong political aspirations, was a leading member of the Democracy in this city, and was elected to Congress from the Fifth District in 1866, and was re-elected in 1868, defeating John Taylor and Augustus Schell. In 1875 he defeated John Fox for the State Senatorship, and in 1877 was re-elected. The exposure to which he subjected himself during the latter canvass brought on a serious illness, laying the foundation of the disease which terminated in his death at Saratoga on May 1, 1878.

THE MORRISSEY-POOLE FIGHT.

The Desperate Affray in Which Poole Met His Death.

During the early '50's the spirit of Native Americanism ran rampant in the land, and nowhere was a greater degree of bitterness developed among the opposing factions than in the metropolis of the country, where the foreign born population was greater than in any other city. It was natural that the antagonism of the two factions should be especially bitter in sporting circles, the class composing which portion of the community was made up in the main of exponents of the science of boxing and their supporters. The animosity existing between the native born citizens and those of Irish birth was particularly strong, and was the cause of frequent affrays. After the departure of Yankee Sullivan for the Pacific Slope, the sons of the Emerald Isle elevated Morrissey to the position of their leader, and he had as followers a number of desperate men. The recognized standard bearer of the Native American party here was Bill Poole, who had graduated from the butcher's stall to the more congenial occupation of proprietor of the Bank Exchange, a saloon at the corner of Broadway and Howard Street, which was the headquarters of the faction whose principles he represented. Although Poole had never aspired to the honors that are to be gained within the "magic circle," he had not neglected his physical education, and before reaching his majority he had acquired considerable knowledge of the art of self defence. He was a man of powerful build, of a bold, aggressive spirit, nervous of temperament, a staunch friend and an implacable foe, ever ready to do a favor for a friend, but just as quick to resent an affront, which he never invited, for he was always affable in his intercourse with his fellows, social in disposition, and his liberality was unbounded. At the time of which we write he was about thirty years of age, in the fullness of robust manhood, and was as fine a specimen of an athlete, untrained, as anyone could wish to see. The rivalry between him and Morrissey was extremely bitter, and increased as time wore on, culminating, after a heated dispute at the City Hotel, on Broadway, on the afternoon of July 2, 1854, in an agreement to fight in rough and tumble style for a stake of $50 a side, early on the morning of the 27th of that month. Morrissey gave Poole the right to name the fighting ground, but when the latter named Christopher Street dock, which was right at Poole's doorstep, as it were, in old Greenwich Village, whose residents were, almost without exception, natives of the soil, and warm friends of Poole, Morrissey objected. He would not agree to fight there, but was willing to go anywhere else that his opponent might designate. Poole, thereupon named Amos Street dock, just a block below the spot originally mentioned. Although Morrissey perceived the error he had committed, he was not the sort of man to withdraw at this stage of the game, and he was on the ground at the appointed time, accompanied by but one friend, Johnny Lyng, who was one of Sullivan's seconds in the fight with Hyer—a man over six feet in height, built in proportion, a natural fighter, who was the proprietor of a drinking establishment at the corner of Broadway and Canal Street. Poole's friends were there in force, and the outlook for Morrissey was anything but reassuring; he would not back out, however, even though feeling convinced that there was no chance for him to defeat his adversary, and he prepared to take his chances. They at once threw off their outer toggery and squared off in front of each other. Morrissey aimed a blow at Poole, who dodged it, rushed in head down, seized his man by the thighs and threw him on his back, falling upon him, and the pair rolling over each other on the dock, fighting tooth and nail for the mastery. It was alleged at the time, and doubtless with truth, that the partisans of Poole aided and abetted him by kicking and otherwise maltreating Morrissey, who, falling in an earnest endeavor to roll his adversary off the dock into the river, where he might have an even chance with him, Morrissey, who was being terribly battered, deemed it wise to cry peccavi. He was then allowed to get up, and him and Lyng (who had also been severely handled for attempting to aid his principal) left for home, amid the jeers of the crowd. As a matter of course this affair, which created great excitement, fanned the flames of their enmity, and as a result the affrays between the opposing factions became of still more frequent occurrence, while it was generally considered to be only a matter of time and opportunity when Morrissey would make an attempt to "get even" for the unfair treatment which he claimed he had received. On the evening of Feb. 24, 1855, Poole and Morrissey happened to meet at Stanwix Hall, 579 Broadway, then kept by Dean & Deagle, and which was a leading resort for sporting men. Several intimate friends of Morrissey were there, also. A quarrel took place between the leaders, and pistols were drawn, but the arrival of the police in answer to a summons prevented the expected shooting match, Poole and Morrissey being taken away by the officers. Had they been locked up over night, the fatal affray that followed might not have occurred, although the probabilities are that it would only have been delayed. Upon being released from custody shortly after he had been taken to the station house, Poole had the hardihood to return to Stanwix Hall. Not long after his arrival in came Louis Baker, Patrick McLaughlin, alias "Paugene," John Hyler, Jim Turner, Cornelius Linn and Charles Van Pelt. That they were bent on mischief was quickly made certain by "Paugene" seizing Poole by the coat collar, applying insulting epithets and daring him to fight him then and there. Poole merely smiled scornfully at him, and then jumped out into the middle of the floor, handed Mr. Dean five twenty dollar gold pieces, and said that he would bet $500 that he could whip any man in the room. No one accepted the challenge, and then Turner showed his colors by throwing off his cloak, drawing a revolver from his belt, and, with the remark: "Let's sail in," discharging his weapon at Poole, but as he discharged it the revolver slipped, and he shot himself in the arm. Poole held up his hands and cried, "You ain't going to murder me?" and as he received in the knee a shot fired by Turner as the latter lay on the floor, Poole staggered, and fell near the man who shot him. Several more shots were fired, and Baker, according to the testimony of eye witnesses, given at the coroner's inquest jumped on Poole, and shot him in the left breast, just below the nipple. Then Poole's assailants ran away. Baker and the rest of them went to Johnny Lyng's place, at Canal and Broadway, where, soon afterwards, the police went in search of them, but they failed to find Baker, who was the party they were most desirous of arresting. The friends of Baker secreted him, quickly raised a fund to liquidate the expense involved in sending him to some safer place than this vicinity, and they succeeded in getting him away on board the brig Isabella Jewett, bound for the Canary Islands. The manner of his escape was quickly discovered, and George Law Sr., having placed the clipper ship Grapeshot at the disposal of the authorities, paying all the expenses himself, the latter vessel started in pursuit of the Jewett, and on April 17, 1855, the brig was intercepted off the port of Palmas, the voyage having occupied twenty days. The officers boarded the Jewett, recognized Baker at once, and, within twenty minutes, had him safely on board the Grapeshot. He arrived in New York in due time, and was locked up in the Tombs to await trial on the charge of murder. His trial took place at the October term of court, his counsel being granted a change of venue, in consequence of the intensity of the feeling against the accused here, and the result was that the jury failed to convict him, and he was released from custody. He resided in this country for some years afterwards, living very quietly, but for a number of years preceding his death, which occurred in August, 1878, he had been a resident of Paris, France. Poole died on March 8, having lived all that time with a bullet imbedded in the muscular substance inclosing the heart, proving that he was a man of remarkable vitality. The last words ascribed to him are: "I die a true American," which appeared in silver block letters on a wide band of black velvet, on each side of the hearse which conveyed his remains to Greenwood Cemetery. New York has seldom witnessed so large and so imposing a funeral as that which took place on March 11, 1855. The sidewalks and windows of the houses all along the route from Christopher Street, in what even today is known as "the American Ward," to Bleecker Street, to Broadway, were filled with sightseers, many of them sincere mourners, while many organizations were represented in the procession, which occupied forty minutes in passing the St. Nicholas Hotel. Across Poole's breast was placed a magnificent American flag, loaned by the Crystal Palace Association. The deceased wore the regalia of the Order of United Americans, and at his head was placed a large gilt eagle. The pall bearers were as follow: Thomas Hyer, Alderman Drake, William Kent, Cyrus Shay, Mr. Lane, Samuel Long, Daniel Williams and Charles Feitner. All of those who were in any way connected with the terrible affray in which he received his death wound have, we believe, now passed away, while Captain Richard Hepburn, who commanded the bark Grapeshot, which brought Baker back to this country, died recently at the veteran sailor's home at Shug Harbor, S. I. Poole's brother John organized the benefit at which Tom Hyer made his last appearance in public, at Stuyvesant Hall, June 21, 1864, just five days before the "Chief," as Hyer was familiarly called, expired.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT.

An international copyright is now provided for in the Revised Statutes of the United States. The mode of procedure necessary to obtain a copyright is, however, not altered (save as relates to foreign works), and we therefore append the following directions, which should materially aid applicants:

HOW TO GET A COPYRIGHT.

Every applicant for a copyright must state distinctly the name and residence of the claimant, and whether the right is claimed as author, designer or proprietor. No affidavit is required.

A printed, or type written, copy of the title of the book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print or photograph, or a description of the painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuery, or model or design for a work of the fine arts, for which copyright is desired, must be sent by mail or otherwise, prepaid, addressed: "Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C." This must be done before the publication of the book or other article.

A fee of 50 cents for recording the title of each book or other article must be inclosed with the printed title, and 0.5 cents in addition (or one dollar in all) for each certificate of copyright under seal of the Librarian of Congress, which will be transmitted by return mail.

Within ten days after publication of each book or other article, two complete copies must be sent, prepaid, to perfect the copyright, addressed: "Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C."

Without the deposit of copies above required the copyright is void, and a penalty of $25 is incurred.

No copyright is valid unless notice is given by inserting in every copy published: "Entered according to act of Congress, in the year —, by — in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington;" or, at the option of the person entering the copyright, the words: "Copyright, 18—, by —."

The law imposes a penalty of $100 upon any person who has not obtained a copyright who shall insert either of the above notices, or words of the same import, in or on any book or other article.

Each copyright secures the exclusive right of publishing the book or article copyrighted for twenty-eight years, and six months before the end of that time a renewal for the further term of fourteen years may be secured.

Copyrights are assignable in law.

A copyright of the record (or duplicate certificate of any copyright entry), will be furnished under seal, at the rate of fifty cents.

THE FULL TEXT OF THE NEW LAW.

The author, inventor, designer or proprietor of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, or photograph or negative thereof, or of a painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuery, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and the executors, administrators, or assigns of any such person shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same; and in case of dramatic composition, of publicly performing or representing it or causing it to be performed or represented by others; and authors or their assigns shall have exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States.

The author, inventor, or designer, if he be still living, or his widow or children, if he be dead, shall have the same exclusive right continued for the further term of fourteen years, upon recording the title of the work or description of the article so secured a second time, and complying with all other regulations in regard to original copyrights, within six months before the expiration of the first term; and such persons shall, within two months from the date of said renewal, cause a copy of the record thereof to be published in one or more newspapers printed in the United States, for the space of four weeks.

No person shall be entitled to a copyright unless he shall, on or before the day of publication in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, a printed copy of the title of the book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, photograph, or chromo, or a description of the painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or a model or design for a work of the fine arts for which he desires a copyright, nor unless he shall also, not later than the day of the publication thereof in this or any foreign country, deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, or deposit in the mail within the United States, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, two copies of such copyright book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, chromo, cut, print, or photograph, or in case of a painting, drawing, statue, statuary, model, or design for a work of the fine arts, a photograph of same: Provided, That in the case of a book, photograph, chromo, or lithograph, the two copies of the same required to be delivered or deposited as above shall be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, or from plates made therefrom, or from negatives, or drawings on stone made within the limits of the United States, or from transfers made therefrom. During the existence of such copyright the importation into the United States of any book, chromo, or lithograph, or photograph, so copyrighted, or any edition or editions thereof, or any plates of the same not made from type set, negatives, or drawings on stone made within the limits of the United States, shall be, and it is hereby prohibited, except in the cases specified in paragraphs five hundred and twelve to five hundred and sixteen, inclusive, in section two of the act entitled "An act to reduce the revenue and equalize the duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety; and except in the case of persons purchasing for use and not for sale, who import subject to the duty thereon, not more than two copies of such book at any one time; and except in the case of newspapers and magazines, not containing in whole or in part matter copyrighted under the provisions of this act, unauthorized by the author, which are hereby exempted from prohibition of importation: Provided, nevertheless, That in the case of books in foreign languages, of which only translations in English are copyrighted, the prohibition of importation shall apply only to the translation of the same, and the importation of the books in the original language shall be permitted."

The Librarian of Congress shall receive from the persons to whom the services designated are rendered the following fees:

First. For recording the title or description of any copyright book or other article, fifty cents.

Second. For every copy under seal of such record actually given to the person claiming the copyright, or his assigns, fifty cents.

Third. For recording and certifying any instrument of writing for the assignment of a copyright, one dollar.

Fourth. For every copy of an assignment, one dollar.

All fees so received shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the charge for recording the title or description of any article entered for copyright, the production of a person not a citizen or resident of the United States, shall be one dollar, to be paid as above into the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of lists of copyrighted articles as hereinafter provided for. And it is hereby made the duty of the Librarian of Congress to furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury copies of the entries of titles of all books and other articles wherein the copyright has been completed by the deposit of two copies of such book printed from type set within the limits of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this act and by the deposit of two copies of such other article made or produced in the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to prepare and print, at intervals of not more than a week, catalogues of such title entries for distribution to the collectors of customs of the United States and to the postmasters of all post offices receiving foreign mails, and such weekly lists, as they are issued, shall be furnished to all parties desiring them, at a sum not exceeding five dollars per annum; and the Secretary and the Postmaster-General are hereby empowered and required to make and enforce such rules and regulations as shall prevent the importation into the United States, except upon the conditions above specified, of all articles prohibited by this act.

The proprietor of every copyright book or other article shall deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail, addressed to the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, District of Columbia, a copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial changes shall be made: Provided, however, That the alterations, revisions and additions, made to books by foreign authors, heretofore published, of which new additions shall appear subsequently to the taking effect of this act, shall be held and deemed capable of being copyrighted as above provided for in this act, unless they form a part of the series in course of publication at the time this act shall take effect.

Every person who shall insert or impress such notice, or words of the same purport, in or upon any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or other article, for which he has not obtained a copyright, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, recoverable one-half for the person who shall sue for such penalty and one-half to the use of the United States.

Every person who, after the recording of the title of any book and the depositing of two copies of such book, as provided by this act, shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, within the term limited, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, print, publish, dramatize, translate or import, or knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such book, shall forfeit every copy thereof to such proprietor, and shall also forfeit and pay such damages as may be recovered in a civil action by such proprietor in any court of competent jurisdiction.

If any person, after the recording of the title of any map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, print, cut, engraving, or photograph, or chromo, or of the description of any painting, drawing, statue, statuary, or model or design intended to be perfected and executed as a work of the fine arts, as provided by this act, shall within the term limited, contrary to the provisions of this act, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more witnesses, engrave, etch, work, copy, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, either in whole or in part, or by varying the main design with intent to evade the law, or knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such map or other article as aforesaid, he shall forfeit to the proprietor all the plates on which the same shall be copied and every sheet thereof, either copied or printed, and shall further forfeit one dollar for every sheet of the same found in his possession; either printing, printed, copied, published, imported, or exposed for sale, and in case of painting, statue, or statuary, he shall forfeit ten dollars for every copy of the same in his possession, or by him sold or exposed for sale; one-half thereof to the proprietor and the other half to the use of the United States.

Every person who shall print or publish any manuscript whatever without the consent of the author or proprietor first obtained, shall be liable to the author or proprietor for all damages occasioned by such injury.

This act shall only apply to a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation when such foreign state or nation permits to citizens of the United States of America the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens; or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may, at its pleasure, become a party to such agreement. The existence of either of the conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation made from time to time as the purposes of this act may require.

THE PENNANT WINNERS, 1891.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION'S CHAMPIONS

A group picture is given on another page of the Boston team, including Manager Arthur Irwin, the winners of the American Association's pennant. The championship race in 1891 was close and exciting, although the Boston team kept in the lead during the greater part of the season, finally finishing first with a record of ninety-three victories and forty-two defeats. The Boston team included Murphy and Farrell, catchers; Haddock, Buffinton and O'Brien, pitchers; Brouthers, Stricker and Joyce on the bases; Radford, short stop, and Richardson, Brown and Duffy in the outfield.

NATIONAL LEAGUE'S CHAMPIONS.

A picture of the Boston team, in citizen's dress, the winners of the National League's championship in 1891, is given on another page. The Boston team made a grand uphill fight the last month of the season, and by winning eighteen championship games in succession succeeded in passing the Chicago team and finally winning the pennant with a record of eighty-seven victories and fifty-one defeats. The champion team, which was managed by Frank Selee, included Bennett, Gansel and Kelly, catchers; Clarkson, Nichols and Staley, pitchers; Tucker, Quinn and Nash on the bases; Loug, short stop, and Lowe, Brodie and Stovey in the outfield. Getzein and Martin Sullivan played part of the season on the team.

THE AMATEUR DEFINITION.NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF AMATEUR OARSMEN.

One who does not enter in an open competition, or for either a stake, public or admission money, or entrance fee, or compete with or against a professional for any prize; who has never taught, pursued, or assisted in the pursuit of athletic exercises as a means of livelihood; whose membership of any rowing or other athletic club was not brought about, or does not continue, because of any mutual agreement or understanding, expressed or implied, whereby his becoming or continuing a member of such club would be of any pecuniary benefit to him whatever, direct or indirect, and who has never been employed in any occupation involving any use of the oar or paddle, who rows for pleasure or recreation only, and during his leisure hours, and who does not abandon or neglect his usual business or occupation for the purpose of training, and who shall otherwise conform to the rules and regulations of this Association (as adopted Aug. 28, 1872, and amended Jan. 20, 1876, and July 18, 1888).

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF AMATEUR OARSMEN.

An amateur oarsmen is one who has not entered in an open competition; or for either a stake, public, or admission money, or entrance fee; or competed with or against a professional for any prize since Jan. 1, 1876; who has never taught, pursued or assisted in the pursuit of athletic exercises as a means of livelihood; whose membership of any rowing or other athletic club was not brought about, or does not continue, because of any mutual agreement or understanding, expressed or implied, whereby his becoming or continuing a member of such club would be of any pecuniary benefit to him whatever, direct or indirect, and who has never been employed in any occupation involving any use of the oar or paddle, and who does not abandon or leave his daily avocation for the purpose of training, or, having no visible legitimate means of support while training, rows for some real or anticipated profit, either direct or indirect, thus showing that he is rowing with the legitimate end that the Association has in view in fostering amateur sport; provided that any oarsman may abandon his legitimate calling or daily avocation for a period not exceeding two weeks during the rowing season for the purpose of training.

ENGLISH AMATEUR ROWING ASSOCIATION.

No person shall be considered an amateur oarsman, sculler or coxswain: 1. Who has ever taken part in any open competition for a stake, money or entrance fee. 2. Who has ever knowingly competed with, or against, a professional for any prize. 3. Who has ever taught, pursued or assisted in the practice of athletic exercises of any kind for profit. 4. Who has ever been employed in or about boats, or in any manual labor for money or wages. 5. Who is or has been by trade or employment for wages a mechanic, artisan or laborer, or engaged in any menial duty.

THE JUNIOR DEFINITION.

A junior sculler is one who has never pulled in a senior nor won a junior race. A junior oarsman is one who has never pulled an oar in a senior race nor been a winning oarsman in a junior race. Competitions with members of his own club will not affect the standing as a junior of any oarsman or sculler. The qualifications of a junior oarsman or sculler shall relate to each time of his coming to the starting post, whether in a trial or a final heat.

AMATEUR SWIMMING CHAMPIONS.

The championship was instituted in 1877 by the New York Athletic Club, which continued it the following year, revived it in 1883, and held it yearly since till 1888, when the meeting was given under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union. The races are straightaway.

RACES FOR THE AMERICA CUP.

Where more than two yachts competed in any of these international races, the position at the finish of the vessel of opposing nationality to the winner is given in parentheses, except in races in which she finished second. What is now known as the "America Cup" was originally called the "Royal Yacht Squadron Cup," and is frequently wrongly termed the "Queen's Cup."

AMATEUR SKATING CHAMPIONS.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

The championship meeting was first held in 1885, under the auspices of the Manhattan Athletic Club, and on their grounds in New York City. The following year the National Skating Association was organized, and the championship races have since then been held under the management of that body, in or near the metropolis, according as suitable ice could be found. The fixture for 1886 was a failure, owing to lack of ice.

AMATEUR DEFINITIONS.

AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION.

One who has not entered in an open competition; or for either a stake, public or admission money or entrance fee; or under a fictitious name; or has not competed with or against a professional for any prize or where admission fee is charged; or who has not instructed, pursued or assisted in the pursuit of athletic exercises as a means of livelihood, or for gain or any emolument; or whose membership of any athletic club of any kind was not brought about or does not continue because of any mutual understanding, express or implied, whereby his becoming or continuing a member of such club would be of any pecuniary benefit to him whatever, direct or indirect, and who shall in other and all respects conform to the rules and regulations of this organization.

PACIFIC COAST AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

An amateur is one who has never competed in an open competition, nor for either a stake, gate money or entrance fee; one who has never competed under a fictitious name, nor with a professional for any prize, or where gate money was charged; one who has never instructed, pursued or assisted in the pursuit of athletic exercises as a means of livelihood, nor for gain nor any emolument; one whose membership of any athletic club was not brought about nor does not continue because of the waiver of the initiation fee or the remission of dues; nor because of any understanding, express or implied, whereby his becoming or continuing a member of such club would be of any pecuniary benefit to him whatever, either directly or indirectly; and who shall in all respects conform to the Constitution, By-laws and Rules of this Association.

And of such amateur athletic clubs which, in addition to the adoption of the foregoing definition, shall have a bona fide amateur membership of at least twenty-five, and which shall be organized and continued for amateur athletic pursuits; and whose membership shall consist only of amateurs. No club which is a branch of, or bears the name of, or directly or indirectly receives support from, or whose members are required to qualify by first becoming members of any club which makes a specialty of professional contests, shall be eligible to membership in this association.

WESTERN AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

An amateur athlete is one who has never competed with or against a professional for a prize; or who has never competed for a staked bet or other monetary consideration, or under a fictitious name; or who has never, directly or indirectly, either in competition or as an instructor, as an assistant or through any connection whatever with any form of athletic games, obtained any financial consideration, either directly or indirectly; who has never sold or pledged any prize or token won or obtained through connection with athletics (this clause is not retroactive), or whose membership in any athletic organization is of no pecuniary benefit to himself, direct or indirect; or who, having transgressed any of the foregoing provisions, has been duly reinstated.

ENGLISH AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

An amateur is any person who has never engaged in, nor assisted in, nor taught any recognized athletic exercise for money, or who has never, either in public or in private, raced or exhibited his skill for a public or for a private stake, or other remuneration, or for a purse or for gate money, and never backed or allowed himself to be backed either in a public or private race.—Adopted 1886.

A novice is one who has never won a prize in a similar class of competition, i. e., winning a prize for walking would not disqualify for running, and vice versa; but winning a prize for running any distance would disqualify for running. This rule does not apply to school and boys' races.

CANADIAN AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

An amateur is one who has never competed for a money prize or stated bet, or with or against any professional for any prize, or who has never taught, pursued or assisted in the practice of athletic exercises as a means of obtaining a livelihood.

ENGLISH SKATING ASSOCIATION.

An amateur is one who has never competed in a skating contest for a money prize.

AMATEUR DEFINITIONS.

LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WHEELMEN.

An amateur is one who has not engaged in, nor assisted in, nor taught 'cycling or any other recognized athletic exercise for money or other remuneration, nor knowingly competed with or against a professional for a prize of any description, or one who, after having forfeited the amateur status, has had the same restored by a competent authority having jurisdiction over the sport.

A 'cyclist ceases to be an amateur by (a) engaging in 'cycling or other recognized athletic exercise, or personally teaching, training or coaching any person therein, either as a means of obtaining a livelihood or for a wager, money prize or gate money; (b) Competing with a professional, or making pace for or having the pace made by such in public or for a prize; (c) Selling, pawning or otherwise turning into cash or realizing upon any prize won by him.

ENGLISH NATIONAL 'CYCLISTS UNION.

An amateur is one who has never engaged in, nor assisted in, nor taught any athletic exercise for money, or other remuneration; nor knowingly competed with or against a professional for a prize of any description, or in public (except at a meeting specially sanctioned by the Union).

KATIE EMMETT.—This clever soubrette was born at Philadelphia in 1859. She made her professional debut at what is now the Central Theatre, that city, in 1874, under the management of J. K. Mortimer, billed as Katie Howard. About 1877 she married William Emmett, with whom she traveled a few years, and then retired to private life. After his death she re-entered the profession, at Chicago, July 11, 1887. She is now the wife of her manager, Harry M. Williams, and is meeting with success in "The Waits of New York," which is her personal property. The piece will be shelved after this season, and Miss Emmett will appear in a new comedy.

FRANCIS BANNERMAN, 118 Broad St., New York City,

HINTS ABOUT GREAT MARCUS AND HIS CARDS. He admits they are well connected, in fact, invisible, but stoutly denies ever using human hair in the construction. The process does not require the rays of the sun, as in the negative, but rather the stillly night. It is the first plant that costs like the old Harry, and if it wasn't for a second mortgage on the building he would not give one of his tricks away for a hundred dollar note. They are valued at five dollars per pack, but would be cheap at any price; they are the best brain and money afford. Meanwhile the sale of cards a la Marcus is going on and he is coining money, and old Schroeder remains his backer; however, he cannot live always, and, as he never has had a successful rival, they can only be had during his lifetime.
