New-York, February 3, 1869.

NOTE.—The Receipts for the year 1869 amount to..... $34,579 99
And the Expenditures to..... 32,150 57

Showing an excess of Receipts over the Expenditures, of..... $2,429 42
But if we deduct from the former the sum of $5,500 received from the Insurance Companies, applicable to the payment of the bills for repairs yet outstanding, we find that the expenditures were in fact $3,070 58 more than the income of the Society. The additional alterations to fit the lower part of the building for business purposes, will probably produce a like result the present year.

The whole number of pensioners at present on the books of the Committee are—

- 5 Aged and infirm members.
- 77 Widows of deceased members.
- 15 Minor children of deceased members.

Of the five aged and infirm members, one is 58 years of age, and has been three years on the pension list; one is 72, and has been four years on the pension list; one is 80, and one year on the pension list; one is 90, and eleven years on the list.

Two of these brothers are in as good health as can be expected at their time of life, and by the aid of their pensions are placed (in the care of children and relatives) beyond the probability of want. Other two of the brothers are in declining health, and are wholly dependent on their pensions as a means of support; the remaining one is completely helpless and bedridden, without any hope or possibility of recovery. The Committee feel extremely grateful to the Society for their liberality in granting to the three brothers last mentioned an additional pension of six dollars per week. This has placed them above present want, and removed the fear that ultimately they would be under the necessity of seeking a refuge in the alms house. The oldest member on the pension list, whose life has been prolonged so far beyond the term allotted to man, has been a member of the Society for sixty-six years. He is able to walk about and converse pleasantly; and although old age has somewhat lessened his intellect, it is far from being extinguished. It is pleasant to hear him speak of the period when he first became a member of the Society, of those who were his fellow members, and of the position and influence of the Society at that time.

Of the 77 widows of deceased members,

7 are between 40 and 50 years of age.

4 of them have been on the pension list for less than one year.

12 have been on the list from 1 to 5 years.

It will be seen from the above, that while some of these widows are in the period of hale womanhood, most of them are well advanced in years, and some of them have reached extreme old age. Some of them are tenderly cared for by their children and relatives, while others are able to earn a living by their own industry; but many of them, since the death of their husbands, have had to fight a bitter fight with poverty, which, but for their pensions and the small donations which the Committee have it in their power to bestow, would have been very hard to endure. During the past year the Committee have visited all the pensioners resident in New-York and the neighboring cities. Though they found many of them poor, none were degraded. Many were highly respectable, and some were educated and refined. The Committee can truly say, that all were worthy, and every one expressed their deep gratitude to the Society for the benefits of which they are the recipients.

During these visits the Committee learned many interesting facts in the history of these widows and their families, which they would wish to communicate to the Society, but as the recital of all of them would occupy too much time, they have selected the following three cases, which they think are deserving of the kindest sympathy.

Mrs. A. B. is the widow of a member who was admitted in 1833, and who died in 1849, leaving her with five children, three of whom, along with the mother, were placed on the pension list. Her three daughters have grown up, and are married. Her eldest son joined the army, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. Her remaining son was struck with paralysis at three years of age. He tries to work and help his mother along, but is very inefficient. She is 53 years of age, and is very poor.

Mrs. M. C. is the widow of a member who was admitted in 1836, and who died in 1846, leaving her with three children, one of whom, along with the mother, were placed on the pension list. Her eldest son, the support of the family, joined the army, was taken prisoner, and starved to death in Salisbury prison.

Her second son was accidentally killed by a stage in Broadway about one year ago. She is at present sixty-three years of age, and lives with her daughter in poor circumstances.

Mrs. J. D. is the widow of a member who was admitted in 1850, and who died in 1858, leaving her with three sons, two of whom, and their mother, were placed on the pension list. Her eldest son joined the army at the breaking out of the war, and after seeing considerable service, was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. Her second son joined the army soon after; was at the battles of Fredericksburgh, first and second, Cheapmount, Antietam, Harper's Ferry, Winchester, Blue Ridge, and the battles of the Chickahominy; got the swamp fever about the last of the war, and is now sick at home, unable to do any thing. Her third son joined the army at fifteen years of age, and was at Bermuda Hundred and Fort Harrison. He was under constant fire for nine months, and came home safe. He is a very steady young man, but has no trade, and does all he can to help his mother along. She is 52 years of age, and when the Committee visited her they found her binding hats at one cent a piece.

Of the 15 minor children of deceased members—

1 is.....	3 years of age.
1 is.....	4 "
2 are.....	6 "
3 are.....	8 "
3 are.....	11 "
1 is.....	12 "
1 is.....	13 "

And they have been on the pension list from one to five years. These children, as they arrive at the age of fourteen, are dropped from the roll, and pass out of the sight of the Committee. At no time are they brought prominently before them; but as far as their observation goes, and judging from the past, the Committee are assured that these children, in the care of their mothers, grow up to be worthy and useful members of society. Some of them, indeed, may become members of this Society, and lend their aid in carrying forward in the future the work of benefiting others, as they themselves have been benefited in the past.

The Committee, in conclusion, hope that a kind Providence will enable them and their successors to dispense the trust committed to their hands with wisdom and benevolence, so as to cause the smile of joy to mantle on the orphan's cheek, to cheer the widow's heart in the dark days of her life, and to keep the chill hand of penury from crushing out the life of the aged and stricken brother, while in the hearts of the recipients self-dependence shall not be destroyed, nor self-respect impaired.

The total number of volumes read during the year was 20,518 less than the year previous ; but the average number was about the same.

Since our last annual report another of our distinguished fellow-citizens, the late Peter Lorillard, Esq., bequeathed for the benefit of the Library five thousand dollars, which has been paid over by the executors to the Society, and your Committee have been appropriating the money as fast as selections of useful and standard works can be made, and will continue to do so until the whole amount is used. They express the hope that others of our fellow-citizens may be led to follow the noble examples of the honored names of Demilt and Lorillard, thus aiding with the accustomed liberality of the Society in sustaining that noble institution, the Apprentices' Library.

It will be seen from the Librarian's report that there is now 38,650 volumes in the Apprentices' Library and 4,090 volumes in the Demilt Library, making in all 42,740 volumes, being an increase of 6,195 volumes over the previous year, and nearly double what there were in 1861. It will also be seen that the number of readers is more than double what it was in 1861, being then 2,569, and now, in 1868, it is 5,246. The total number of volumes read in 1861 was 64,610, and now, 1868, there has been read 98,860, being an increase of 32,250; these figures show a very gratifying result. 1861 may be considered a fair comparison to the present year's operations, because the report of that year showed more readers than any previous year in the history of the Library, and the number read 8,844 more than the previous year, 1860. But the result would be still more in favor of the present year, were it not for the fire which occurred last spring, and which necessarily caused a falling off in readers while the premises were undergoing repairs.
