I am deeply grieved to hear of the death of your father for whom I had great admiration and sincere affection. His extraordinarily useful life made a great contribution to the progress and welfare of the nation. He was a great American and his leadership will be sorely missed.

I had a long talk with him only a month or two ago at the dinner of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation and found him at that time in excellent spirits and apparently in good health. His passing therefore comes as an added shock to me.

Mrs. Lehman joins me in heartfelt sympathy to you and your brothers.
