First, Mr. Fitzpatrick refused to withdraw his resignation, thus leaving the post open unequivocally. Secondly, party leaders talked with Mr. Doyle Monday evening and persuaded him that with a distribution of the chairman's duties, he would be able to serve as chairman and also continue his law practice. Mr. Doyle is one of the most amiable men in the party. His ability to get along with others is what each year brought him higher in the party's estimation until finally he was chosen to lead it.

His duties under Chairman Fitzpatrick were to watch with an eagle eye all legislation introduced in Buffalo, Albany and Washington.

Opposed Frontier Bill
When the Mahoney-Gugino bill was introduced last year in Albany, Mr. Doyle and his committee decided it would not improve the frontier but would improve the power of the Republican-controlled Board of Supervisors. The Doyle committee urged Governor Lehman to veto the bill and he did.

Mr. Doyle avoided the factional disputes which split the party four years ago and is therefore considered acceptable to all elements now.

Mr. Doyle was born in Fairport, Monroe County in 1889 and attended Masten Park High School and the University of Buffalo, from which he received his law degree in 1911. He read law for a year in the offices of Supreme Court Referees Clinton T. Horton and Thomas H. Noonan.

Ran For Assembly
In 1911, he started practice in the firm of O'Connor, Newton & Doyle. This firm was dissolved in 1934 and since then he has had his own office in the Walbridge Building.

He ran for the Assembly in 1919 and 1920 against County Judge George H. Rowe and was defeated both times in a district which has been Democratic only once. In 1934 he was town attorney of Cheektowaga, where he lives at 80 Mapleview ave.

Mr. Doyle is married and has one son, Owen W. Doyle, a student at Notre Dame University. Mr. Doyle is chairman of the Advisory Board of the Sisters of Saint Francis.
