My dear Governor,

I have intended writing you ever since the election to congratulate you. I know of course that Mr. González wrote you in both our names at that time. I have regretted so much that my health did not permit me to go home for your campaign. I should like to have been with your political family at headquarters on election night and personally congratulated you, as I had on all your previous victories. But we were with you in spirit.

Mr. González and I have been exceedingly interested in making a study of the possibilities of the Latin American countries being able to offer a haven to the persecuted peoples from Germany and Austria. These Latin countries have great potential wealth in their lands and offer opportunities through their vast underdeveloped sections to carefully selected groups of immigrants who would be willing to develop them.

Mr. Gonzaga has been going into this question very carefully with the various government officials and certain individuals in Venezuela as to their reactions etc.

He was able to accomplish some results while in Ecuador and I looked forward to his being able to do a great deal more here now.
This whole question has been most interesting to me from a humanitarian standpoint. My social service training seems to stand bye me wherever I go.

Mr. González is leaving the Diplomatic Service, under compelling circumstances which I would be grateful if you would learn from others. We are returning home in February, but if the knowledge acquired from being on the ground will be of any use to the various committees working on the matter in the States, we are at their service.

With kindest regards to Mrs. Lehman and to you in which Mr. González joins me, Sam.

Very sincerely,
Evelyn D. González.
