The only cheering word came for those who urged restoration in the Board of Education budget of $40,000 for extending its small program for the care and education of children crippled with cerebral palsy.

Mrs. Stanley M. Isaacs, a director of the New York Service for Orthopedically Handicapped, had spoken and Dr. William Cooper of the Coordinating Council for Cerebral Palsy was speaking when Budget Director Thomas J. Patterson told Mr. Impellitteri that although the $40,000 did not appear in a lump sum in the budget, as requested, it was there in the form of $23,000 for repairs and $17,000 for transportation.

The $40,000 is to increase the present class of thirteen to two classes for forty children. There are 7,000 to 10,000 children with cerebral palsy in the city.
