I have no words in which to talk of this splendid boy, whom we all loved and to whom today we are saying good-bye. And yet it is not good-bye, because he will always live in our hearts. He was clean and loyal and honest and courageous. Bravely he faced the problems of life and bravely he met the mystery of eternal rest. His monument will be the love that he has built in the hearts of all who knew him. May he sleep in peace and security!

Words spoken at funeral of Charles Altschul II
