History

The World Missionary Conference held in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1910 established a plan for greater cooperation among Protestant mission groups, and soon regional committees were established in mission fields to continue its work. Its chairman, John R. Mott, visited China in 1913 to initiate a series of local meetings discussing the aims of the conference. These culminated in a national conference held in Shanghai in March, where delegates from the local conferences met to discuss the past, present and future of Protestant mission work in China.

The China Continuation Committee was formed as a result of the national conference in Shanghai. It differed from past efforts at cooperation between Protestant mission groups in that it emphasized Chinese participation and leadership, and sought to play an advisory rather than a legislative role. In 1922 it fulfilled its aim by establishing the National Christian Council of China, and the committee was dissolved.

The committee was headed by Edwin Carlyle Lobenstine, 1872 - 1958, of the American Presbyterian Mission and Ch'eng Ching-yi, [Cheng Jingyi 誠靜怡], 1881 - 1939, of Beijing. In 1914 Abbe Livingston Warnshuis, 1877 - 1963, was appointed as National Evangelistic Secretary.

Collection Scope and Content Note

This collection was reconstructed in late 2009 from previously unprocessed records, and consists mainly of minutes from committee meetings and papers presented at the local and national conferences held in 1913. Two sub-committees are represented: the Social and Moral Welfare Committee, and the Phonetic Promotion Committee. Several related organizations and individuals are represented in other archival collections:
