INSIGHTS FROM THE CONFERENCE

“What we do—although we’re all feeling very put-upon right now—is something people want. You cannot refute the law of supply and demand. What we do is fun. It’s entertaining. Sometimes it’s high art, sometimes it’s pratfalls, but what we’ve got is what people want. We seem to forget that. We feel like it’s something we’ve got to shove on the public. I think if we said more often to people, ‘The train’s leaving the station. If you want to have a good time, get on the train,’ then we’d be a lot more successful.” - Patricia McLaughlin, president, Beacon Artists Agency

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

MORE THAN A year in the making, this report would not be possible without the contributions of many NAJP staff members, fellowship alumni and affiliates. Michael Janeway and András Szántó initiated and oversaw the conference and the report, and an advisory group of Columbia scholars led by Evangeline Morphos and including Arnold Aronson, Casey Nelson Blake and Ester Fuchs helped further refine the details of its planning. Vicky Abrash managed the conference itself with aplomb.

Christopher Hawthorne (a 1999 NAJP fellow) and Jeremy Simon were instrumental in the editing and development of the report, as well as the planning of the conference. Adam Langer (a 2001 NAJP fellow), Tony Brown (a 1995 NAJP fellow) and theater professor Michael Paller each authored significant portions of it. Peggy Chapman created the report's design as well as all conference-related printed materials. Rebecca McKenna and Aileen Torres provided consistent and valuable support.

We are indebted to the many in the theater and research communities who have contributed their time and expertise. It is difficult to find reliable data about the theater industry, but the following people in particular guided us in fruitful directions: Randall Bourscheidt, Kinshasha Holman Conwill, Suri Duitch, Karen Hauser, Kevin McCarthy, Virginia Louloudes, Robert Marx and George Wachtel. The names of conference moderators and speakers, whose input was invaluable to the conference and the report, are listed on the next page, as are full citations of the data sources and studies cited in this report.

Lastly, we thank our co-presenters and sponsors, without whom Wonderful Town would be languishing in previews: The Pew Charitable Trusts; The Fan Fox and Leslie R. Samuels Foundation; Columbia University's School of the Arts and School of Journalism; and the university's Office of the Vice Provost. ■
