HIGHLIGHTS: 2003–2004

In recognition of its 250 years of leadership in higher education, the University continued its yearlong anniversary celebration with academic symposia, festivities, and public programs around the world.

- An unprecedented number of world leaders visited Columbia University in September 2003 in conjunction with the United Nations General Assembly.
- Columbia University President Lee C. Bollinger and senior faculty participated in the World Economic Forum in January 2004 in Davos, Switzerland. The University’s presence underscored the role Columbia plays in addressing the complex factors affecting global societies.
- The Earth Institute received a gift of $15 million from University Trustee Gerry Lenfest (Law ‘58) through the Lenfest Foundation. The gift will endow the first Earth Institute professorship and promote sustainable development.
- Columbia University Libraries was designated the depository institution for the Human Rights Watch Archive in February 2004.
- To meet its formidable space constraints, Columbia, in partnership with the communities of upper Manhattan, continues to move forward with a major initiative to expand into an 18-acre area of Manhattanville in West Harlem. The proposed development is expected to result in an estimated $5.7 billion in economic stimulus to New York’s economy and yield a net increase of thousands of jobs for the area.
- The Mailman School of Public Health received $125 million from the Centers for Disease Control for HIV treatment in Africa.
- Columbia University’s Genome Center was designated a Center of Excellence in Genomic Science and will receive a three-year, $11 million grant from the National Human Genome Research Institute of the National Institutes of Health.
