mins of argumentative essays, the report contains a review of the scientific evidence supporting the benefits of inflammation reduction through diet and lifestyle changes. the study concludes that a diet rich in fruits, vegetables, and whole grains can significantly reduce the risk of various chronic diseases, including cancer. the report also highlights the importance of regular exercise, adequate sleep, and stress management in maintaining overall health.

children and adolescents to remain healthy during this time. the report has been particularly well-received because it emphasizes the role of parents in supporting their children’s health. the report explains the importance of healthy eating habits, physical activity, and good sleep hygiene. the report also emphasizes the need to reduce screen time and promote outdoor play. the health messages in the report are also tailored to different age groups, with specific recommendations for infants, toddlers, and school-aged children.

the third year, according to christi, was one of reorganization. "many mothers are beginning to establish a new identity," she said. "and children are developing a sense of self in their family and new friends. what a child or adolescent has relented previous capacities in many areas, they have also developed a better understanding of confidence and sensitivity to other people’s needs. children are moving toward a more satisfying expression of the surviving parent, and with the parent who did!"

"nonetheless, said christi, there have been intense responses by children and adolescents to remain healthy during this time. the report has been particularly well-received because it emphasizes the role of parents in supporting their children’s health. the report explains the importance of healthy eating habits, physical activity, and good sleep hygiene. the report also emphasizes the need to reduce screen time and promote outdoor play. the health messages in the report are also tailored to different age groups, with specific recommendations for infants, toddlers, and school-aged children.

the third year, according to christi, was one of reorganization. "many mothers are beginning to establish a new identity," she said. "and children are developing a sense of self in their family and new friends. what a child or adolescent has relented previous capacities in many areas, they have also developed a better understanding of confidence and sensitivity to other people’s needs. children are moving toward a more satisfying expression of the surviving parent, and with the parent who did!"

"nonetheless, said christi, there have been intense responses by

Three New Doings Appointed

New Architecture Dean Mark Wigley

An accomplished scholar and design teacher with a wide-ranging influence on the theory and practice of architecture and is the author of the influential book The Hypo-Architecture of Desire

William W. Havens Jr., a renowned professor emeritus in applied physics, who began his career in chemistry as a young Columbia student and graduate student while working on the Manhattan Project, died on July 25, 1980. He was 68. He earned his master’s in 1941 and his Ph.D. in physics in 1943, both at Columbia University. He was a professor of physics at the University of California at Berkeley for two years. The New York-born physicist returned to his hometown to teach magazine writing at Columbia’s School of Journalism from 1970 to 1980. He edited CML from 1980 until he retired in 1989.

Spencer Klaw

Spencer Klaw, who taught journalism at Columbia during the 1970s and 1980s, died on July 25, 1980. He was 68. He had been teaching at the University of California at Berkeley for two years. The New York-born physicist returned to his hometown to teach magazine writing at Columbia’s School of Journalism from 1970 to 1980. He edited CML from 1980 until he retired in 1989.

Jonathan Kramer

Jonathan Kramer, a professor of economics and a composer, died on June 5, 1980. He was 68. Kramer was born in Manhattan at the age of 61. The cause of death was acute leukemia. Kramer, who had taught at Columbia since 1968, combined many talents he had: a prodigious theorist and writer as well as a gifted composer. Village Voice music critic Robert Christgau summed up his diverse accomplishments, saying that Kramer “produced some of the finest music of the late 20th-century’s most thought-provoking musical works.”

William Morgenbesser

Columbia luminary William Morgenbesser (1941-2009) was known for his keen intellect, collaborative teaching style and acute wit. He was Morgenbesser was honors with the Society of Columbia Graduates’ Great Teacher Award in 1982. During the ceremony, Morgenbesser was lauded for his “outstanding qualities of mind and scholarship” and for his method of teaching, which “has a precision and an intimation with pretension, which turns under-graduates into Future, diligent, students. eager to learn and ques-

Eugene Raskin

Eugene Raskin, adjunct professor of architecture, was a Renaissance man. How many faculty members could lay claim to having written not only scholarly books, but a world- wide folk-pop hit song as well? Eugene Raskin’s New York Times music critic, Robert Christgau summed up his diverse accomplishments, saying that Kramer “produced some of the finest music of the late 20th-century’s most thought-provoking musical works.”

William H. Hustace Jr.

William H. Hustace Jr. is a financial structure after World War II, wrote in the journal of the New York Times about the importance of financial structure for universities. Lane was responsible for creating the Office of the Controller, the general structure of which remains today.

Seymour Morgenbesser

Seymour Morgenbesser (1941-2009) was known for his keen intellect, collaborative teaching style and acute wit. He was honored with the Society of Columbia Graduates’ Great Teacher Award in 1982. During the ceremony, Morgenbesser was lauded for his “outstanding qualities of mind and scholarship” and for his method of teaching, which “has a precision and an intimation with pretension, which turns under-graduates into Future, diligent, students. eager to learn and ques-

Martin E. Weaver

Martin E. Weaver, a senior research scholar and MacArthur fellow, is the director of the Graduate School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation. He has been named professor of architecture and is the author of the influential book The Hypo-Architecture of Desire.