New Chair in Israel and Jewish Studies Established

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center's new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America's war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution's first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.

By Professor Yeol Na安全隐患

Faculty Perspective

Toward 21st Century America in a Theocracy

Columbia University has established a new chair at the Center for Israel and Jewish Studies. The center’s new Senior Vice Chancellor Chair will augment the study of modern Israeli history, politics, and society, as well as the study of the University Plans also are under way for the creation of a new visiting professor position in Jewish studies.

By Jagdish Bhagwati

Two cases currently before the U.S. Supreme Court are drawing attention to America’s war on terrorism and the rights of religious groups. In these cases—in one, from Texas, on the public display of the Ten Commandments on public school property; and the other, from Kentucky, about the display of the Ten Commandments in public schools—both of the secularists insist that such displays violate the U.S. constitution’s first amendment right to free exercise of religion. Both cases now come in sequence as the Supreme Court has the final word on church-state separation. As Justice Marshall said, Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. In church-state separation, both cases deal with the religious freedom issues.