In his final days, he was polishing his keynote speech for “Columbia and Modern China: The Chinese Connection,” part of Columbia University’s 250th anniversary celebration (as reported in the previous issue, Vol 59 No 2).

Wang served 28 years with the United Nations as director of the Center for International Business Corporations and head of Technical Assistance Missions to developing countries.

Born in Shanghai on July 25, 1917, Wang was initially trained as a Confucian scholar. He transferred to Columbia College, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa with honors in economics in 1941, and went on to receive an M.A. and Ph.D. in economics from Harvard in 1943 and 1945, respectively.

His other publications include: Business with China, China’s Modernization and Transnational Corporations, Transnational Corporations and China’s Opening Policy, and Taiwan’s Enterprises in Global Perspective.

He was an honorary professor at 10 universities, a fellow of the International Academy of Management and a recipient of the New York Governor’s Award for Outstanding Asian American.
