A blatant disregard for international law that threatens the security of the United States. Noam Chomsky, Professor of linguistics and a professor of politics, is one of the panelists at the Earth Institute’s annual forum, which he attended to present his research on the future of governance in a post-9/11 world. Chomsky, a critic of the Bush administration’s policies in the Middle East, addressed the importance of international law and its role in maintaining global security.

Chomsky’s lecture, “Illegal but Legitimate: A Dubious Doctrine of the Times,” is part of the Critical Lectures in American Foreign Policy series, spearheaded by Eric Foner, Distinguished Professor of History at Columbia University, and Herbert S. Lehman Professor of Anthropology and Modern Middle Eastern Studies and Literature, Mahmood Mamdani, and Professor of Professional Practice, David Dinkins, professor of professional practice, and former Mayor of New York City, along with other leading political lawyers and city officials, met at the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) for a reexamination of national and urban responses to immigration.

The Annual David N. Dinkins Leadership & Policy Forum included a keynote address by America’s state senator, the Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO) president John Sweeney, who delivered a keynote speech on the importance of immigration rights movement.

“Historically, immigrant workers played a major role in building the strongest economy and the most vibrant democracy in the world,” said Sweeney, who described Chomsky as a critic, liberal, and a critic of the Bush administration’s policies in the Middle East.
