Rethinking Women-In-Jazz Historiography
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.
302 Philosophy
The Center for Jazz Studies presents “Rethinking Women-In-Jazz Historiography: Panel and Screenings.” It has been 20 years since the publication of book-length histories of women in jazz by Sally Plaskitt, Linda Dilli, and D. Antonette Handy, yet jazz history continues to be commonly told as a history of musical men. This panel and screening addresses these questions, and raises suggestions for future jazz historiography that accounts for women and gender. Kay D. Ray’s film, Lady Be Good: Instrumentalists as Actors in Jazz History, will be screened.

Through Jan. 28
Rare Book and Manuscript Library, 6th Floor East, Butler Library, 630 S. W. 11th Street, 11th floor, New York, New York 10027.

Dance Dance Revolution
Through Jan. 21, 2005
The Leffey Neiman Gallery, Dodge
Curated by Matthew Lyons and Larka Tattersall. Featuring an international group of established and emerging artists, Dance Dance Revolution demonstrates a renewed interest in dance both as a strategy of social resistance and as a way to forge community across restrictive social boundaries. Combining film, video, performance, painting and photography, the exhibition explores this dynamic intersection between the visual arts and vernacular dance forms.
