

EXHIBIT 1: ONLINE LEARNING AND DIGITAL MEDIA INITIATIVES COMMITTEE ROSTER

NORMAN CHONACKY is a senior research scientist in Biomedical Engineering at SEAS. He is a non-senator.

JOHN B. DONALDSON is the Mario J. Gabelli Professor of Finance and academic director of the Business School. Prof. Donaldson received a 2001 Presidential Award for Outstanding Teaching. He is a non-senator.

JEFFREY ENGLER, student, nonsenator

AVERY KATZ is a tenured professor in the Law School. He is a senator and served on the 2000-2001 Subcommittee on Fathom.com, which recommended the formation of this committee.

DAVID MAGIER is director of Area Studies (Columbia Libraries), co-director of the Digital South Asia Library project, and principal library consultant for the American Overseas Digital Library project. He also serves as South Asia librarian at Columbia. He is a non-senator.

ROBERT MCCLINTOCK, observer: Rom2/robbie@ilt.columbia.edu

STEPHEN A. NEGRON, a member of the GS class of '91, is a project leader of information systems, and producer/writer on technology and new media for the ABC Television Network. Negron chairs ABC's volunteer committee on Technology, and is president of the Center for Technology Solutions, a non-profit volunteer-based organization. He is a non-senator.

SHARYN O'HALLORAN is a tenured professor of political science and international affairs in GSAS. She is a senator and served as co-chair of the Subcommittee on Fathom.com.

SCOTT SANDLER, student, senator

KATE WITTENBERG is the director of the Columbia online enterprise Digital Knowledge Ventures. She initiated and directed EPIC and CIAO, and was the editor in chief of Columbia University Press. She is a non-senator.

HERVE VARENNE is a tenured professor in Teachers College. He is a senator and served on the Subcommittee on Fathom.com.