Description of measure: The RAWA is a 14-item measure that assesses marital violence attitudes. It was developed by combining the Attitudes toward Wife Abuse scale (Briere, 1987) and the Likelihood of Battering Scale (Briere, 1987). Based on the suggestions of domestic violence service providers working with Asian battered women, an additional item regarding the justified use of violence was added. Respondents rate the 8 items of the Male Privilege and Perceived Lack of Alternatives sub-scales on a 6 point scale (1.very true, 2. somewhat true, 3. true, 4. false, 5. somewhat false, 6. very false). All items on the Male Privilege sub-scale should be reversed scored before summing. Scores on these two sub-scales are a sum of the responses. They range from 4-24. The 6 items of the Situational Approval of Violence sub-scale are rated on a 4 point scale (1.Very likely, 2. somewhat likely, 3. slightly likely, 4. not at all likely). All items on this sub-scale should be reversed scored before summing. The score on this sub-scale is a sum of the responses and range from 6-24.

The RAWA has shown promise as a measure of marital violence attitudes. In the future, it may be helpful to alter the response categories to be more uniform (i.e., answer all 14 items on a 4 scale). Using a six-point scale is somewhat problematic unless the instrument is administered in English. Also, future research should include convergent and discriminatory variables to facilitate assessment of validity.

Description of Asian Population: Six hundred and eighty adults (i.e., Cambodian, Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, Asian Indian, mixed Asian heritage, and Other) completed the RAWA. The Other category included Caucasian, African American, Hispanic, Japanese, Thai, and those of undisclosed ethnicity. As a group, the sample was 58% female with an average of 35.2 years old ($SD = 15.2$). Sixty-eight percent of the total sample was under the age of 40 years. Sixty-five percent immigrated to the United States and those who immigrated have lived in the U.S. an average of 14 years ($SD = 8.3$). Finally, the sample was relatively well educated with 63% having received some college education.

Language Availability: English, Mandarin, Khmer, Vietnamese, Korean

Translation Comment: The survey was translated and back translated into each language. Each translated version of the measure was pilot tested with groups of Chinese, Cambodian, Vietnamese, and Korean adults that who volunteered at a local Asian domestic violence agency. This procedure provided a high degree of assurance that the integrity of each question was preserved following translation.

Norms: A factor analysis of the scale based resulted in the development of three sub-scales. They are Male Privilege (Items 3,4,6,8), Situation Specific Approval of Violence (Items 9-14), and Perceived Lack of Alternatives for Battered Women (Items 1,2,5,7).

Factor Structure and Loading of Scale Items

Factor Items	Cron. Alpha	Factor Loadings
		Factor 1	Factor 2	Factor 3
Factor 1 Situation- Specific Approval of Violence	.89
A husband/man has the right to hit his wife/girlfriend if she:
18. had sex with another man		.69	.31	.02
19. refused to cook and keep the house clean		.81	.18	.12
