EAS 231: Chinese Martial Arts Classics: Fiction, Film, Fact

This course provides an overview of Chinese martial arts fiction and film from earliest times to the present day. The focus will be on the close-reading of literary, art-historical, and cinematic texts, but will also include discussion of the significance of these works against their broader historical and social background. Topics to be discussed: the literary/cinematic pleasure of watching violence, the relationship between violence and the law, gender ambiguity of the woman warrior, the imperial and (trans)national order of martial arts cinema, and the moral and physical economy of vengeance.

No prior knowledge of Chinese, martial arts, Chinese history is required. All texts are in English or subtitled.

Lecture: Tuesday-Thursday 10.00-10.50, Jones Hall 100
Discussion Section: Tuesday or Thursday 13.30-14:20, 15.30-16.20

Grading:
Final Paper: 40%
Biweekly Write-ups: 40% (5x8%)
Participation: 20%

Writing Assignments:
Students are required to post on alternating weeks a 500-750 word response to material covered in class that week. Postings should be made on the Blackboard course website at 12 midnight, the day before precept discussion. Postings should reflect a thoughtful reading of the material and facilitate discussion in lecture and precept.

The final paper or project should be about 10 pages long (double-spaced, 12 point, Times New Roman). Organize your thoughts before you start writing. Structure your argument well and pay attention to both content and style, as both will influence your grade. Late papers will be accepted in cases of documented emergencies only. Proper research methods, citation of sources, and academic integrity will be discussed in class. By April, you should have had some sort of discussion with either your professor or preceptor about a potential topic. A brief synopsis of the thesis of the final paper is due April 21. The paper itself will be due on Dean’s date.
Active precept participation is crucial and requires full familiarity with the contents of the lectures, films and the assigned readings. You will be called upon in both lecture and precept, so make sure you have spent sufficient time thinking about the material beforehand.

Readings:
All readings except for the book to be purchased will be made available through the course Blackboard site. Please use the editions printed on the syllabus, not alternative translations (including the original text in Chinese). In order to be able to follow the lectures, complete assigned readings before coming to the lectures. The films can be accessed from the course Blackboard site. Films should be viewed before the lecture in which they will be discussed.

Please purchase the following books (available at Labyrinth Bookstore):
