

My Spring Break

Kai Chang

This past March during spring break, I went to Florida with my friends to spread the gospel. This missions trip was organized by a very big Christian Organization; over one thousand three hundred students from all over the United States attended.

The weather on the day we arrived was amazing. From our room, we had an unbelievable view of the Gulf of Mexico. Upon seeing the beauty of our surroundings, we all ran down to the beach. There were thousands of people on the beach when we got there and although it was only about three in the afternoon, many of the spring breakers were already so drunk that they could barely walk. These people came here to find fulfillment; however, despite all their partying, when they leave this place, they will still be unfulfilled.

I believe that God loves us and created us to know Him personally; however, because of our sin, we cannot know this perfect and holy God. Jesus Christ is God's only provision for our sin so that we may know God and we must each accept Jesus's sacrifice on the cross for us in order to be able to know God personally.

Because I believe these things, I felt great pity for the spring breakers around me. My friends and I, along with the thousand other Christians from this organization, spent the week evangelizing to these spring breakers.

This spring break was very tiring for me; however, I believe that heaven is celebrating the work we did.
