

September 2015 Global Temperature Update

Strong El Nino warming in the tropical Pacific, combined with the underlying global warming trend, should make 2015, and probably 2016, record warm years. The El Nino is likely to influence U.S. climate this winter, perhaps bringing California abundant rain and making this winter less cold than the past two winters. Please click here to view updated global temperature figures

