Description: Globalization involves the increasing integration of economic, social and political processes across international borders. Workers in Bangalore man telephones in the middle of the night to provide technical support to customers in the US and Europe. Farmers in Chiapas and college students in Nice demonstrate against the World Bank. Multinational corporations and backyard businesses clamor for greater access to markets. Governments in Asia find that they are beholden to panic by investors a world away. Assembly lines in Detroit close as new cars from Malaysia, Mexico, or Mississippi, designed in California or Milan and marketed by firms in Tokyo, Seoul, or Munich, prove cheaper, and more appealing to new consumers.

These processes (or ones like them) have always been with us. However, the scale and scope of globalization creates challenges to existing political structures that are much more potent than ever before. International politics has traditionally been organized around the physical control of geography by sovereign governments. Globalization poses increasing tensions for the nation state and increasing contradictions for international politics. This course will begin to map some of the most obvious examples where sovereignty and the global society collide. Globalization defies easy definition in part because these processes are dynamic and ongoing. We will attempt to approach globalization in that light, as a work in progress, still evolving and malleable.

Assignments: There are three assignments for the course:

- 1.) Attendance/Participation (30%) – students will be required to attend class and to take an active role in discussing the readings. We will evaluate participation as input to discussion.
- 2.) Presenting the Readings (30%) – students will be paired randomly, two to each reading, and asked to prepare a brief (5 to 10 minutes) presentation of the reading. We will then discuss the readings in class, comparing and contrasting arguments, and also introducing other sources and our own insights. Students are encouraged to introduce their own insights.
- 3.) Paper (40%) – each student will prepare an independent research paper designed to focus more deeply on some topic of interest to the student and relevant to the course. The paper will be prepared in three stages. First, at about the fourth week of classes, each student will submit a proposal. The proposal should contain a research question, proposed (tentative) explanation, and a preliminary list of relevant sources. The proposal must be submitted on time. Those who fail to submit by the due date will receive a zero for 5% of their final grade. Second, a draft of the paper should be submitted on Dec. 4 at the beginning of class. This should be a complete paper. We will provide feedback on the draft paper, with instructions for revisions due in the final draft. Again, failure to submit the draft paper on time will result in the student receiving a zero for 5% of the final course grade. Finally, the completed paper, worth 30% of the course grade, will be submitted in hard copy by 11am on Monday Dec. 18.

Readings: The following books are available for purchase at Labyrinth Bookstore:

- Michael Weinstein, ed. Globalization. What's New? Columbia University Press, 2005.
- Samuel P. Huntington et al.. Clash of Civilizations: The Debate. Norton & Company, 1996
- Joseph E. Stiglitz. Globalization and Its Discontents. Norton & Company, 2003.
