Top 10 things you need to know about the Libraries:

10. Your Columbia ID card is your library card and your photocopy card. Your network ID (UNI) and password enable you to use many library online services.

uni.columbia.edu

9. There are 25 Columbia and affiliate libraries available to you. Learn more about them by visiting their home pages.

www.columbia.edu/cu/web/indiv/libraries

8. Butler Library has 24-hour study rooms; a 24-hour CULT lab; a lobby Information desk; the Reserves desk; the Reference desk; and a coffee bar.

www.columbia.edu/cu/web/indiv/butler

7. An enormous amount of information, available from on or off campus, is just a click away on the Libraries’ website.

www.columbia.edu/library

6. Clio, the online catalog, is your starting point for finding materials in the Libraries’ collections.

clio.columbia.edu

5. You can access your Course Reserves readings from CourseWorks or from Clio.

Course Reserves

4. To see all of our most important electronic resources, click on Databases from the E-Resources menu or the QuickSearch link.

wwwapp.cc.columbia.edu/kdp/app/rt/index.jsp

3. Become a power user of our library resources or learn how to use one of our many software tools; take a free library workshop.

www.columbia.edu/cu/lweb/services/workshops

2. Please be considerate of others while studying. No food, no talking on cell phones, and clear the area when you leave. Please use a spill-proof mug.

1. Librarians are here to help you. Just Ask Us!

www.columbia.edu/library/ask

www.columbia.edu/library/ask
Do the Right Thing: Always Cite Your Sources

If you cut and paste...
You have access to a wealth of online library databases at Columbia that includes encyclopedias, dictionaries, and databases of full-text articles. Electronic library resources are not freely available; they are paid subscription databases with information that is protected by copyright and licensing restrictions. So, if you cut and paste you need to cite your sources. Also, do not let others use your UNI (University Network ID) to access these resources.

Give credit where credit is due...
Plagiarism is the failure to acknowledge ideas or words that are not your own. Any phrase or idea, in any format, that you use from online or printed sources must be attributed to the original author/creator of the work. Examples of copyrighted materials include:

- Text from online and printed books and articles
- Images, photos, maps, drawings, logos, films, DVDs, videos
- Websites (both content and design)
- Quotes from e-mails, bulletin boards, IM’s and online chats

Do the right thing....
An essential part of the writing process involves documenting your research and acknowledging the ideas of others. Use ethical research practices and avoid legal consequences. Whenever you use information found in electronic resources make sure to cite your sources and respect intellectual property. Use programs like RefWorks or Endnote, which are available to you for free, to format your citations automatically.

To learn more...

Documenting Your Research:
Use the Bedford Handbook
www.dianahacker.com/resdoc/

RefWorks:
www.columbia.edu/cu/lweb/help/howto/endnote/index.html

Copyright Information:
www.columbia.edu/cu/policy/copyright-info.html

Your Responsibilities:
www.columbia.edu/cu/policy/responsibility.html