Motoring with SIPAs Institute of Latin American Studies

By Ginger Adams Otis

In a career rich in accolades, Holloway’s recent years have been a testament to his dedication to the field of anthropology. In 2002, he received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the American Academy of Political and Social Science. His contributions to the field of human evolution have been recognized with numerous awards, including the Fiske Prize from the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In 2004, he was awarded the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the University of New Mexico. Holloway’s research has been published in many prestigious journals, and he has served on the editorial boards of several leading anthropological journals. His dedication to teaching and mentoring has been acknowledged with the University of New Mexico’s Distinguished Teaching Award. Holloway’s legacy continues to inspire new generations of anthropologists to explore the mysteries of our species’ past and present.