LANGUAGES (A minimum of two languages is required for M.Phil.)

A reading knowledge of two languages. One language, typically Arabic, Persian, Turkish, or possibly Hebrew, is intended to give the student access to primary sources relevant to their research. The second language shall be chosen among those needed for an active engagement with secondary literature. The student may apply the language used to fulfill the M.A. requirement toward the M.Phil. degree, provided it is relevant. The language must be two years of study or the equivalent of that as long as there is a proof of proficiency. Required languages are to be determined in consultation with the advisor.
