

Department of Physics Colloquium

"Massive Gravity versus Cosmological Constant"

I will briefly review -- in physics and historic context -- what appears to be one of the most persistent enigmas in fundamental physics, called the Cosmological Constant Problem. I will argue that a recently formulated extension of General Relativity to a massive theory has right ingredients to begin to address the problem.

Gregory Gabadadze, New York University

---

Monday, February 4, 2013 : 428 Pupin Hall / 4:10 PM